VIENNA RIOT SUPPRESSED, CHANCELLOR ANNOUNCES

Official Statement From Seipel's Office Says 12 Persons Were Killed, 119 Hurt in Outbreak.

WORKERS CALLED OUT IN GENERAL STRIKE

Austrian Capital Virtually Isolated by Tie-Up of Trains, Street Cars and Communications.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, July 16.—An official communique issued by the office of Chancellor Seipel today said that yesterday's outbreak had been supressed.

The communique stated that 12 persons were killed and 119 injured.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, July 16.—The Austrian Council of Ministers has declared itself in permanent session to deal with the situation arising out of the rioting and bloodshed in Vienna yesterday. The council held its first meeting this morning in the office of Chancellor Seipel. It was announced that the Government had taken all possible measures to prevent a recurrence of disorder.

Troops are in control of the situation although a general strike has been called and the city is isolated, without railroad or street car service and without certain wire communication.

Private property is said not to have been damaged during the disorders.

The Cabinet has had lengthy conferences with Prefect of Police Schober and high officials of the Department of Posts and other ministeries.

When the strike of Postoffice and telegraph employes was announced last night, Chancellor Seipel took steps to protect foreign missions and communicated to them the plans decided on for that purpose.

No decision has ben reached as to whether the National Assembly shall be convened to consider the political situation, which has been made difficult by the riots. This step has been discussed by the Chancellor and opposition leaders.

Murder Case Verdict Starts Riot.

The acquittal of a number of former soldiers who were accused of having killed a Socialist at Schalendorf in January precipitated the riots. The acquittals were announced Thursday night after violent political speeches by counsels for both the prosecution and defense. A large crowd which was waiting outside for the verdict immediately started hostile demonstrations against the judges which led to minor clashes and police interference.

It was early yesterday morning, however, when the real trouble began as soon as newspaper reports made the verdict generally known. Some of the newspapers printed denunciations of the verdict. Workers left the factories and began moving in the direction of Ringstrasse shouting "Murderers! Down with class justice!"

Officials and clerks were dragged out and beaten by the enraged mob and were only saved from lynching by volunteer Red Cross workers. Meanwhile a desultory fire was opened on the rioters from another story of the law courts.

The mob prevented the efforts of the fire brigade to extinguish the flames at the Palace of Justice and for a time it seemed as if police had disappeared.

Rioters Driven Back.

Toward 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the Republican Schutzbund began an advance toward the Palace of Justice and was immediately involved in heavy fighting. Shots were exchanged and there were numerous wounded on both sides. The crowd eventually was driven back and the fire brigade was able to play streams of water on the burning structure.

At 4 o'clock regular troops, armed with machine guns, advanced on the Palace of Justice and the fighting continued.

In the Josefstrasse, a mob burst into the printing and editorial departments of the Wiener Neueste Nachrichten. The rioters seized copies of the paper and burned them in the streets.

The mob also stormed and set fire to the building of the Reichspost and also attacked several police stations.

The stations were attacked after police had fled for their lives

FLYERS SAFE AT HONOLULU; OUT OF FUEL, CRASHED IN TREE ON MOLOKAI ISLAND

Smith and Bronte Sent S O S When Gasoline Pump Failed — 60 Miles Short of 2400-Mile Goal

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, July 16.—Having completed their uncertain flight to Hawaii by deliberately plunging into a Kaiwe tree on the island of Molokai, Ernest L. Smith and Emory B. Fronte explained as they rested in Honolulu why their radio was silent for five hours after they sent out S O S calls and why they continued on toward land without informing rescue ships that they still were in the air. Neither flyer was hurt in the landing.

When still 500 miles or more from land, Bronte disclosed, the failure of their gasoline pump led them to believe their fuel was running extremely low and it caused the plane to lose so much altitude that their trailing wireless antenna struck the sea and was torn away.

The decrease in altitude had the effect of resuscitating the gasoline pump and they shot up into the air again and headed for land without knowing how long the gasoline would last, without knowing whether their calls had been heard and uncertain of their bearings.

Navy flyers announced they had salvaged the motor and instruments from the wrecked plane and had found her gasoline tanks absolutely dry.

Saw Neither Land Nor Sea.

Smith and Bronte are the first civilians to fly from California to Hawaii. They won a fight with unfavorable weather, preverse luck and all the natural odds that flyers face in crossing the sea with land planes. They dived into a tree when their last drop of gasoline had been used, thus forestalling the possibility of being pinned beneath their plane in an upset.

From the time they left the Golden Gate at 11:08 a. m., Thursday until they were near their destination, they saw neither land nor sea. Several times Smith reported seeing beautiful stretches of "land" tempting enough for the exhausted flyers to aligst upon, but the visions were only illusions—mirages cast upon the clouds and fog by the light of the moon.

S O S Messages.

The climax of their trouble came about 5:15 a. m., Honolulu time yesterday. At that moment they sent out their first S O S after concluding they had only enough gasoline to stay in the air another hour. Presumably they were about 700 miles from Honolulu and 500 miles from the nearest land.

"We are going to land in the sea. We have a rubber life boat, but send help," several ships reported them as saying.

Three steamers, the liner Wilhelmina, the army transport Kenowis and the steamer President Pierce, turned off their courses and rushed to their aid, the Wilhelmina appearing to be the nearest—apparently about 200 miles away.

Less than 30 minutes later the flyers sent out a new call for help estimating their gasoline supply sufficient to last them four hours. The plea for assistance was continued.

Message Variously Received.

The last message from the plane was received differently by the several ships and land stations. One message received by the Navy quoted the plane as saying "we are landing in the water," several later reports had it "we are going to land."

Soon the Wilhelmina sent a wireless that the plane had settled to the water and that the vessel supposedly was about 90 miles from the ship. All radio stations were silenced in the hope that further word would come from the monoplane's radio. None came. Visions of possible disaster forced the ships toward the spot at full speed. Then there was a long silence.

Word of their forced landing on Molokai at 9:46 a. m., Honolulu time, (2:16 p. m. St. Louis time) then was flashed into Honolulu. Army planes left Wheeler Field, near here, to take them off the leper island and bring them in triumph to Honolulu.

The little monoplane, City of Oakland, which had been groomed for weeks in anticipation of the flight, was badly damaged. The plane was in the air 25 hours and 36 minutes, during which she traveled about 2340 miles. The flyers were in the air 14 minutes longer than were Lieuts. Maitland and Hegenberger in their Hawaiian flight.

Message Unread for Two Hours.

From Molokai Island, 60 miles from their destination, Smith and Bronte sent a wireless to Capt.

BALCHEN AGREES TO CARRY A HAT; NEVER WEARS ONE

Pilot Compromises With Commander Byrd for Homecoming Ceremony.

By the Associated Press.

S. S. LEVIATHAN, July 16.—Bernt Balchen, youthful Norseman of Commander Byrd's crew of trans-Atlantic aviators, who has not worn a hat for years, is offering stubborn resistance to the suggestion by Byrd and his companions that Balchen must wear a hat up Broadway to the New York City Hall for Monday's reception.

Balchen cannot remember when he owned a hat, but Byrd bought him one in Paris and insists on its being worn.

After an evening of pleading with Balchen the only assurance which could be secured from the young aviator was his laconic, "Well I'll carry it in my hand."

In New York City the temperature reached a maximum of 90 degrees, one degree below the high mark of the hot wave.

STONES FALL FROM AIR IN SPAIN

Great Damage Wrought by Meteorological Phenomenon.

MADRID, Spain, July 16.—Report comes from Madrid of an extremely rare meteorological phenomenon which devasted the vineyards in Castille and in Aragon, in the neighborhood of Teruel, where an avalanche of stones followed heavy rain and hail.

A high cloud, swept along by a strong westerly wind, passed over the country and at the same instant a torrent of stones, some of which were the size of an egg, fell, killing fowls, injuring cattle, making holes in roofs, and breaking windows. Meteorologists declare that they must have been taken up by a cyclone and that they came from a region very far distant from where they fell.

TRIES TO SHOOT MANICURE, THEN ENDS OWN LIFE

F. Verne Spangenburg Swallows Poison After Being Disarmed and Under Arrest at Maryland Hotel.

LEAVES LETTERS INDICATING PLANS

One Addressed to Mother Says Gladys Sutton, Girl in the Case, Had Broken His Heart.

While under arrest, F. Verne Spangenberg, Illinois University graduate and business manager of the Missouri Pre-Digest, a law publication, ended his life with poison in his room at the Maryland Hotel yesterday afternoon, after he had failed in an attempt to shoot his erstwhile fiancee, Miss Gladys Sutton, a manicure, in the hotel barber shop.

Yesterday was Spangenberg's thirty-fourth birthday. Discharged at noon from the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium, where he had been treated since Tuesday for nervous trouble, he returned to his room, No. 506, in the Maryland Hotel. Accompanied by a friend, Cecil L. Giles, 4109 DeTonty street, he went down to the barber shop at 5 o'clock.

As he stepped from a chair, after getting a shave, he drew a revolver from his pocket, aimed it at Miss Sutton, who was near, and pulled the trigger. The cartridge failed to explode. He was disarmed by Giles and a barber, and placed under arrest by Traffic Policeman Gordon, summoned from Ninth and Pine streets.

Ends Life With Poison.

He asked to be permitted to visit his room before going to the police station. Policeman Gordon and Giles went to the room with him. He handed the policeman a stack of letters, but Gordon declined to read them. Spangenberg then went into a bathroom, emerging a moment later. He started to leave his room with the others, but raised a bottle to his lips, drank the contents and fell dead. The bottle contained a liquid solution of a poison taken from a box in the bathroom.

Miss Sutton, a blond, 23 years old, was arrested last night at her apartment, 3658 West Pine boulevard, and spent the night at the matron's room at police headquarters. She was released this morning after testifying at the Coroner's inquest, repeating statements previously made to police and reporters. Deputy Coroner Dever said a verdict of suicide would be returned as soon as the nature of the poison had been determined.

The letters which Spangenberg had handed to the policeman included one addressed to his mother, Mrs J. S. Spangenberg of Pontiac, Mich., in which he announced, "I am ending it all tonight," and added, "The only girl I ever loved was Gladys Sutton and she has broken my heart."

Letter to Former Wife.

Another letter was to Mrs. Carrie Spangenberg of Chicago, who divorced him a year ago. Spangenberg wrote that the divorce was a good thing, as they could not get along together.

A note addressed to "The Press of St. Louis" referred to his disappointment in love with Miss Sutton.

Miss Sutton told reporters she met Spangenberg six months ago and became engaged, but broke the engagement a month ago because of his jealousy and eccentricities. Last Monday night she returned to her apartment to find Spangenberg seated there, revolver in hand. He remained until 3 a. m., threatening to kill her and himself. Finally she summoned a neighbor and he left. On his way out, she said, he tried to dive into a shallow goldfish pool in the apartment lobby. That day he went to the sanitarium.

"I was manicuring a girl friend when he came into the barber shop,' said Miss Sutton. "He said, 'Gladys, how are you?' I merely looked at him. 'Will you take dinner with me this evening?' he asked. Again I said nothing.

"I was walking past him when he attempted, like a coward, to shoot me in the back. He was crazy, and his actions proved it."

FORD RETRACTS AND SAPIRO WITHDRAWS HIS LIBEL SUIT

FLYER CONFESSES THAT HE BOMBED BIRGER ROADHOUSE

Elmer Kane Says Joe Adams, Murdered Mayor, Gave Him $1000 and Auto to Drop Explosives.

NAMES SHELTONS AS PLOT LEADERS

Declares Gangsters' Aids Made Infernal Machine — Held in Iowa on Conspiracy Charge.

By the Associated Press.

WATERLOO, Ia., July 16.—Elmer Kane, young Waterloo aviator, was arrested early today in connection with the bombing of the Birger roadhouse near Marion, Ill., Nov. 12, 1926. Police said Kane had made a signed statement that the late Joe Adams, Mayor of West City, Ill., had paid him $1000 and given him an automobile as payment for his part in the bombing.

Charlie Birger, gang leader, is on trial at Benton, Ill., charged with the murder of Mayor Adams.

On the night before the bombing, Kane's signed confession said, he was flying from Sparta, Ill., to Benton. In landing at Benton, he had a minor accident, and while repairing it, three men, who he said he later learned were members of the Shelton gang, approached and offered him the job of bombing the roadhouse from his airplane.

Tells of Bomb-Making.

He accompanied them to a house in West City, wher he met a number of men, including, he said, Bernie and Carl Shelton and Mayor Adams. After further discussion of the proposal he spent the night at the home of Gus Adams, brother of Joe Adams, where, the statement said, the bombs were made by a Shelton gangster.

"About 2 a. m., the same night members of the Birger band came along and virtually riddled the house with a machine gun," the confession said, and then continued:

"On the morning of Nov. 12, I went to the home of Joe Adams to see about the $1000 and the automobile he and the Sheltons had agreed to give me for bombing the road house.

Arrest of the Sheltons.

"Bernie and Carl Shelton were there. Shortly after my arrival Federal officers came to the house and arrested Bernie and Carl Shelton for complicity in the Collinsville, Ill., mail robbery. After they left, Joe Adams gave me $1000 cash. I later got the automobile from a man unknown to me.

"After receiving the money, I went to my airplane, parked on the outskirts of West City. When I arrived there, I found a member of the Shelton gang with the plane. He had the bomb already loaded in the plane and was ready to start.

"I drove the plane over to the Birger roadhouse and he, the member of the Shelton gang, dropped the bomb. After the bomb was dropped, we flew to Du Quoin, where I let the member of the Shelton gang out. I then flew to Burkville, where the automobile, given as part consideration for the bombing, was waiting."

Kane is being held, on a charge of conspiracy to murder, for authorities in Williamson County, Illinois.

Birger Defense May Summon Flyer to Trial at Benton.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BENTON, Ill., July 16.—Elmer Kane, Waterloo, Ia., aviator, who has stated that he was hired by the late Mayor Joe Adams of West City, Il., to pilot the airplane from which bombs were dropped on Charlie Birger's roadhouse, may be brought here as a witness at Birger's trial for the murder of Adams.

Charles A. Karch, one of Birger's lawyers, said it is possible the defense will present Kane, if he is willing and if his testimony is compatible with the nature of the defense. Karch said the defense attorneys were not fully decided about using Kane.

Gus Adams, brother of the murdered Mayor, denied knowing Kane or knowing about the bombing plans.

"I'm not surprised at Kane's confession. I expected something like this," commented State's Attorney Martin. "Kane's statement

AUTO MAKER INDORSES FARM CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING

Announcement of Agreement Says Settlement as to Costs Is 'Personal Matter Between the Parties.'

INACCURACIES IN ARTICLES ADMITTED

Likewise, Charge That There Was a Jewish Ring Seeking to Exploit Farmer Is Retracted.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Aaron Sapiro's $1,000,000 suit against Henry Ford was settled today, Sapiro announced.

The suit was settled on the basis of a new statement which Sapiro announced had been issued by Ford, in addition to the recent apology for anti-Jewish statements apearing in Ford's publication, the Dearborn Independent.

Sapiro, an attorney, sued Ford for libel as a result of some of the articles alleging Sapiro was engaged in cooperative marketing as part of a Jewish conspiracy to obtain control of American agriculture.

No money settlement was involved, Sapiro said.

Statement By Ford.

A statement authorized by Ford and made public by Earl J. Davis, one of the men in whose hands Ford rested the final negotiations, follows:

"The Dearborn Independent wishes to announce that the suit commenced by Aaron Sapiro for libel against the Dearborn Independent and Henry Ford has been terminated satisfactorily to all parties.

"The suit was based upon statements appearing in a series of articles published in 1925 and 1926 by the Dearborn Independent upon the subject matter of co-operative associations organized on the Sapiro plan.

"The articles complained of by Mr. Sapiro dealt with the so-called Sapiro plan of co-operative marketing and the relations of Mr. Sapiro with the associations organized on this plan. They were prepared and written by a contributor to the Dearborn Independent, whose works and writing have in the past appeared in various periodicals in this country. They were accepted at their face value by the Dearborn Publishing Co. It has since been found that inaccuracies of fact were present in the articles and that erroneous conclusions were drawn from these inaccuraacies by the writer.

"As a result of this, Mr. Sapiro may have been injured and reflections cast upon him unjustly. Such statements as may have reflected upon Mr. Sapiro's honor or integrity, impugned his motives or challenged the propriety of his personal or professional actions are withdrawn. Likewise the charge that there was a Jewish ring which sought to exploit the American farmer through co-operative associations is withdrawn.

"Henry Ford did not participate personally in the publication of the articles and has no personal knowledge of what was said in them. He, of course, deprecates greatly that any facts that were published in a periodical so closely associated with his name in the minds of the public should be untrue.

"The articles in question dealt with co-operative marketing. The Dearborn Independent has published repeatedly articles dealing with various phases of this subject and of other subjects of interest to the farmer.

"If the advancement and development of co-operative marketing has suffered by reason of the publication of these articles, then we sincerely regret it. We recognize co-operative marketing holds promise of substantial relief to the farmer and the grower."

While the precise terms of the settlement were not announced for

COOLIDGE HEARS DEMOCRAT URGE FARM RELIEF

South Dakota Governor Speaks on Subject in Presence of President at Picnic at Ardmore.

EQUAL RIGHTS PLEA FOR AGRICULTURE

Expresses Opinion Repeal of Tariff Legislation Would Furnish Ample and Permanent Relief.

By the Associated Press.

ARDMORE, S. D., July 16.—President Coolidge today heard a demand for farm relief by Gov. Bulow, South Dakota's Democratic Governor, wh ospoke before the farmers assembled here for a picnic.

"This country ought to do one of two things," the Governor declared. "Either there should be adopted a policy that prevents artificial price fixing for things the farmer has to buy and restore the economic law of supply and demand on a world basis or else permit agriculture and equal opportunity for the establishment of artificial prices for its products.

"My own notion is that a repeal of the tariff legislation that discriminates against sections of our country would furnish ample and premanent relief."

The President will visit the Ardmore Government Station which is experimenting in dry farming. Governors Emerson of Wyoming, and McMullen, of Nebraska, had been invited, but were unable to attend.

BANK CREDIT ON INCREASE, FEDERAL RESERVE REPORT SAYS

Increase of $900,000,000 Between February and June Recorded—Commodity Prices Decline.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Continued growth of bank credit, a sustained volume of production and trade, and the absence of further declines in the general level of commodity prices, are listed by the Federal Reserve Board as the outstanding characteristic of the credit and business situation for the first six months of this year.

An increase of more than $900,000,000 between February and the high point at the close of June occurred. For the first time since 1924, a considerable growth was shown in the volume of credit extended by New York City banks.

Industrial production increased in May, continuing at a higher level than a year ago, the report states. Distribution of commodities was in smaller volume, with the general price level of wholesale commodities changing little. Output of manufactures increased considerably, although many commodities ranged around the April level. Sales of retail stores showed more than the seasonal decline.

HAWAIIAN FLYERS SAFE AFTER FORCED LANDING IN TREE

Lowell H. Smith of round-the-world-flight fame, now stationed at Wheeler Field. Because Smith was absent when the message arrived, it lay unread for nearly two hours while thousands were wondering what had become of the City of Oakland.

As Smith and Bronte received the plaudits of all Hawaii each gave credit to the other for bringing the plane to land.

Despite the fact that the plane's radio receiving apparatus broke down shortly after the start, and in spite of fog and apparent discrepancies in position reports as received by listening ships, Bronte had pointed the way unerringly. The plane never had been far off its course, and Bronte had been guiding it only by dead reckoning.

Smith and Bronte said their flight demonstrated the practicability of trans-Pacific air travel. Asked what was the hardest part of the trip, Smith said: "It was all hard—it was work all the way through."

They said the gasoline pump failed shortly after 5 a. m., Honolulu time, causing them to send their first S O S message 15 minutes later. Just out of Oakland, Smith lost his goggles when he stuck his head out of the cockpit into a violent rush of wind.

"Conditions for navigating were not the best, but I think the flight has proved that it is perfectly feasible to make hops between San Francisco and Hawaii," said Bronte. "It also is proved to my satisfaction that modern planes can annihilate great distances."

Neither man slept during the flight and they said they moved about enough to prevent becoming cramped. They declined to discuss future plans, but Smith said he had several flights figured out.

Asked if he knew where he was when over Molokai, Smith said: "All I knew was that we were out of gas." He declared they were on their course throughout the night.

Regarding his distress message, Bronte said: "They told us before we left San Francisco that we had enough gasoline. But we didn't have enough. We were forced to land as our gas gave out. In sending out the message that we were to land in the sea, I said 'we will be forced to land because of shortage of gas.'"

Early Hours of Flight.

Smith and Bronte started their flight from Oakland Airport, in the San Francisco Bay district at 10:40 a. m. (Pacific time) Thursday after making one false start and nearly wrecking the plane by striking a rut along the edge of the runway. The plane straightened out over San Francisco for Hawaii at 11:08 a. m. (Pacific time).

Bronte sent out hourly messages on his small radio set, telling of a sea of fog below the plane as far as eye could reach. At 2 p. m. Thursday he said "we hope to run out of it soon."

The plane's radio receiving set was reported "on the bum" at 2:30 p. m.

The first steamer to report hearing the plane's messages was the steamer Manoa, about 450 miles out of San Francisco at 3:45 p. m.

Land radio stations received word regularly from the plane until 7:45 p. m., Thursday, at which time the plane's position was estimated to be 725 miles out from San Francisco and its average speed up to then was figured at 92 miles an hour.

Then there was silence until 3 a. m., Friday when the steamer Wilhelmina, 1850 miles out of San Francisco, and the Army transport, Kenowis, 700 miles out of San Francisco, reported hearing Bronte's signals. The ships said they could not read the message because it was too weak.

At 4 a. m., Pacific time, the steamer Waniwa reported the plane 950 miles from Honolulu at 2:57 a. m.

S O S Call Relayed.

The first S O S call was received by ships at 6:13 a. m. (Pacific time). The message relayed from the ships said that the plane had but an hour's supply of gasoline and was 700 miles from the nearest land.

About a half an hour later another S O S was received from the plane correcting the first report to say that there was fuel enough aboard to fly four hours and repeating the call for help.

At 6:20 a. m. (Pacific time), the steamer Wilhelmina, then 200 miles from the position given by Bronte, reported that it had started to aid the airmen. The Wilhelmina estimated the plane's point of descent at 500 miles northeast of Paia, Island of Maui.

The lack of later messages from Bronte led to the belief that the plane had landed on the water. The radio set would be put out of commission immediately on the plane striking the sea.

Then with receipt of word that the flyers had made the Island of Molokai, some 60 miles southeast of Honolulu, the steamers and the mine sweeper Pelican, which was sent out from Honolulu, were instructed to abandon the search.

WRECKAGE OF PLANE MAY BE THAT OF CAPT. SAINT ROMAN

Engineer Identifies It As a Goliath Type Used by Missing French Flyer.

By the Associated Press.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, July 16.—The wreckage of an airplane found some time ago by a fisherman in the Amazon Estuary and taken to Para, has been identified by an engineer as a goliath, strengthening the belief that it was the plane of Capt. Saint Roman. The engineer said the machine was in rather good condition and must have made a fair landing, as the wheels showed no damage whatever.

Saint Roman and a flying companion left St. Louis, Senegal, May 5, for a flight across the Southern Atlantic to South America. A report of their having been seen within 200 miles of the Brazilian coast was never confirmed and when they failed to appear at Pernambuco an extended search was carried out without success. French airplane experts have expressed the opinion that the plane found at the mouth of the Amazon River, from its description, was the one in which the missing airmen started their flight.

PERCHED ON FLAGPOLE 16 DAYS

CHICAGO, July 16.—After sitting on top of a flagpole on the Morrison Hotel, 631 feet above the street, 16 days, Joe Powers came down last night. Powers established a record for living on a flagpole. He weighed about 10 pounds more than when he went up, but was minus seven teeth, lost in a storm which dashed him against the pole.

Food was sent to him and he also had a telephone part of the time.

WHITE HOUSE COLLIE DIES

RAPID CITY, S. D., July 16.—Prudence Prim, one of the White House collies, is dead. She succumbed to distemper at Fort Meade, a military station, where a corps of veterinarians had worked over her ceaselessly since her illness began nearly a month ago. Prudence Prim was a mate to Rob Roy, the two pets of President and Mrs. Coolidge.

CHAMBERLIN AND BYRD CONFER ON SHIP-AIR SERVICE

Captain of Leviathan Also Takes Part in Discussion Regarding U. S. Lines Project.

By the Associated Press.

S. S. LEVIATHAN, July 16.—The project of expediting mail and passengers by a combined ship and airplane service across the Atlantic was seriously discussed by Capt. Hartley of the Leviathan, Commander Richard E. Byrd and Clarence D. Chamberlin yesterday.

The discussion was prompted by receipt of a message from David A. Burke, manager of the United States lines at New York, who advised Capt. Hartley that he was proposing to recommend a definite plan to the Shipping Board if the conference on the ship concluded that it was feasible.

Both Commander Byrd and Chamberlin joined Capt. Hartley in concluding that it was feasible to begin experimenting on a ship-to-shore service when the ship was within 500 miles of port, lengthening the distance to 1000 miles when conditions were practical.

Chamberlin expressed willingness to sign a contract to begin such flights personally at once with a Bellanca plane, using a collapsible runway sloping from the top deck of the bow

Byrd's Recommendation.

Commander Byrd recommended a catapult, using a Vought seaplane or a Leoning amphibian, carrying approximately 300 pounds of mail or three passengers, making it possible, with complete safety, to cross the ocean in two hours less than four days. Capt. Hartley did not believe that the weather would offer difficulty in such a service.

Such expedition of certain classes of mail, including quicker transmission of banking paper, is an important feature, while business men could have Saturday morning in New York and be in London or Paris on Wednesday.

Many Radio Invitations.

Commander Byrd and Chamberlin are receiving many invitations by radio for functions to be held in their honor in the United States. They have been unable to answer all of them, Commander Byrd more or less relying upon Grover Whalen and Chamberlin upon former Senator Lockwood, to whom he refers the queries.

As far as Commander Byrd is concerned, he points out that the pressure of time prevents his acceptance of the invitations because of the imminence of his departure on his South Pole flight.

Chamberlin has received the following from Paris: "Please mail autographed menu keepsake for son born July 4 during our banquet. Signed. Nirdlinger."

Plans for New York's Reception to Aviators.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Formalities of New York's welcome next Monday to Commander Richard E. Byrd, his colleagues of the America—Bert Acosta and Lieuts. G. O. Noville and Bernt Balchen—and to Clarence D. Chamberlin are announced by Grover A. Whalen, chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Receptions.

From the time the city tug Macom draws alongside the Leviathan in Quarantine at 9 a. m., honorary salutes, marine and land parades, official receptions, ceremonies at the shrine of Eternal Light, all have been dove-tailed into a 12-hour ritual of honor to the famous trans-Atlantic air quintet.

With the flyers aboard, the Macom will steam up the bay flanked by harbor craft in column formation to a din of sirens and whistles. Nine guns at Governor's Island will boom the navy's official salute.

Under escort of United States soldiers, sailors and marines the aviators will go to City Hall for the formal address of welcome by Mayor Walker at 1:10 p. m. One hour later the aviators with Gov. Smith or his representative and Mayor Walker will review the parade following ceremonies at the Eternal Light in Madison Square where the flyers, with an official of the French Embassy, will lay commemorative wreaths.

In the evening there will be a theater party for the aviators. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will be a member of the welcoming party that will meet the Leviathan, his representative, N. H. Bruno, announces.

WELLS DISAVOWS SOUTHERN BRIDGE APPROACH FETE

Former Mayor Says Use of His Name in Plans for Celebration Is Unauthorized.

Former Mayor Rolla Wells, protesting yesterday against unauthorized use of his nam as an honorary chairman for the South Side celebration of the municipal appropriation for the building of the proposed $1,500,000 southern approach to the Municipal Bridge, reiterated his old view that the bridge was "a monument of folly," and added that the authorization of the additional approach was "simply a repetition of the same misconception."

Wells' views were expressed in a letter to Frank K. Harris, head of the publicity department of the Lafayette South Side Bank, who is general chairman of the Celebration Committee. Wells said:

"I am in receipt of your letter of July 13 referring to me as a member of the "Southern Approach Celebration Committee."

"The use of my name in this matter is unauthorized and I decline to participate in the 'civic and industrial parade' referred to.

"The official records of the City of St. Louis very clearly set forth my official opposition to the erection of the Municipal Bridge now located at the foot of Chouteau avenue.

"In my opinion this structure was conceived and projected and made possible through unwise legislative action as a result of a misconception of the important subject involved.

"The recent act of the Board of Aldermen authorizing an additional large expenditure of money to be added to this 'monument of folly,' is simply a repetition of the same old misconception and a continuance of the provincial attitude of the Board of Aldermen of this city in the most important problem confronting a commercial metropolis.

"In my judgment, the proposed 'Southern Approach Celebration' is unwarranted as far as the city as a whole is concerned."

The name of Harold M. Bixby, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and an opponent of the Southern Approach, also was included without authorization in the list of chairmen for the celebration, as were the names of three former presidents of the Chamber, W. Frank Carter, Carl F. G. Meyer and F. W. A. Vesper, who opposed building the approach.

BROKER KILLED BY PARTNER IN FIGHT OVER FINANCES

Former Chain Grocer, Who Admits Beating Californian With Hammer and Shooting Him, Pleads Self-Defense.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, July 16.—An argument over finances, which last night resulted in the killing of Frederick A. Stern, 40 years old, wealthy broker and manager of the Rothschild Mortgage and Finance Co., and the arrest of his partner, Jacob Goldstein, 56, former Columbus, O., chain grocery operator, was being investigated today.

Goldstein's story to the police was that he had beaten Stern with a hammer and fired four shots into the broker's body in self-defense.

"I had to kill him," he repeated to the police, who were called after late home-bound office employes, hearing the shots, burst into the luxurious offices of the finance company and found Stern dead on the floor and Goldstein sitting in a chair, with a pistol in his hand.

Goldstein later amplified his defense, declaring Stern came into the office bearing a hammer, evidently recently purchased, in wrapping paper. The argument followed, Goldstein said, with Stern insisting that Goldstein, who had invested $100,000 in the company, place more money in the enterprise. Goldstein said Stern became enraged and struck him with the hammer. Goldstein backed away to a desk drawer, from which he drew a pistol purchased three days before, and fired.

When officers arrived they found the hammer on the floor beside Stern. The broker had been struck on the skull. The office showed signs of a violent struggle.

Goldstein was taken to jail. An inquest has been asked for by the police.

Goldstein came here from Columbus, O., five years ago. Both men were married, with families.

MEXICO SAYS PARLEY WITH AMERICANS IS FRIENDLY

Foreign Office Disputes Report That Relations Are Srtained Over Arthur Brewer Murder.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, July 16.—Various questions pending between the Mexican and United States governments and cases affecting the interest of American residents in Mexico "are being discussed in an atmosphere of friendliness," the Mexican Foreign Office announces.

"Fortunately, there have not occurred frictions of any kind between the two governments," says the statement, issued by the Foreign Office in response to reports that the relations between the United States and Mexico have been strained over the recent murder of Arthur Brewer, the former Harvard football star, and the refusal of drilling permits to some foreign oil companies who have not compiled with the new petroleum law.

"KING OF THE BOOTLEGGERS" LOSES FIGHT TO EVADE PRISON

Probation Denied William B. Dwyer and Aid in $40,000,000 Liquor Syndicate by U. S. Court.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Last-minute efforts to save William B. Dwyer, known as "King of the Bootleggers," and Edward C. Cohron, his "pay-off man," from the penitentiary, have failed.

Motion to admit them to probation was denied by Judge Mack of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and their counsel was ordered to surrender them to the United States Marshal today, to be taken to Atlanta to begin serving their two-year sentences.

Dwyer was arrested on Dec. 3, 1925. Authorities charged that he was the head of a $40,000,000 liquor syndicate and was virtually "the backbone of Whisky Row." After litigation lasting nearly a year, Dwyer and Cohron were found guilty of conspiracy to violate the liquor and customs laws.

GERMAN WAR ACE KILLED IN FLIGHT STUNT

Paul Baeumer Drops With Plane From Height of 10,000 Feet Into Sound Near Copenhagen.

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, July 16.—Paul Baeumer, German war ace and famous stunt flyer, was killed last night while giving an exhibition of folling at an altitude of 10,000 feet. The machine dropped into the 25-foot deep water of the Oresund with such velocity that it buried itself far into the ground under the water, burying Baeumer underneath.

Baeumer was the teacher of Fraulen Thea Rasche, the German aviatrix, who is now en route to the United States with the idea of making a flight from America to Germany.

The German ace recently established what was claimed to be a world's altitude record for small planes by going up 24,272 feet. Shortly after this came the announcement that he had established new world speed records for small machines with one passenger and a pilot.

WEEKLY BUSINESS REVIEW

Commercial Interests of Saint Louis

St. Louis now has more than 150 individual institutions engaged in the manufacture or jobbing of men's clothing. It is claimed that St. Louis is now the largest market west of New York for men's suits. It is also claimed that St. Louis has the largest open stock of men's hats in America. Fifty St. Louis factories are engaged in the manufacture of men's hats and caps. There are 36 manufacturers and wholesalers of men's shirts. Twenty firms are engaged in producing men's neckwear.

It's the little things in business that destroy our efficiency and fill our minds with worry, according to Floyd Parsons. He says that the people who accomplish the most are those who never do anything that can be done just as well by a lower-priced employee. They never write a letter, sharpen a pencil, carry on a telephone conversation or see a caller if anybody else in the organization whose time is worth less can do it for them.

A recent survey of vehicular traffic in St. Louis—the first made since 1916—shows increases up to 900%. At one point on Delmar Boulevard 990 vehicles passed a given point in one hour. A previous count showed only 358 in an entire day.

Plans recently announced call for the erection of a six million dollar general warehouse covering eight city blocks. It will, according to report be built on the river front.

STATE BUILDS UP ITS CASE AGAINST BIRGER, HYLAND

Brother of Murdered Mayor and Another Witness Swear to Gang Leader's Threats to Get Him.

HYLAND ON SCENE AT TIME OF KILLING

Mrs. Joe Adams, Widow, to Take the Stand Monday—No Session of Court at Benton, Ill., Today.

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BENTON, Ill., July 16.—When the story of Joe Adams' murder moves on to stronger dramatics Monday in resumption of testimony against Charlie Birger, Ray Hyland and Art Newman, the alleged conspirators, State's Attorney Martin will be building his case on firm groundwork laid yesterday.

The State established two lines of evidence yesterday: First, that Hyland, according to the testimony of six witnesses, was in company of the actual murderers of Adams a few minutes before the murder and was on the scene when the shots were fired; second, that Birger had many times threatened to kill Adams.

Gus Adams, brother of the murdered Mayor of West City, and Waddell True, a West City barbecue stand proprietor, quoted Birger in violent and profane threats. Each time they said, "He (Birger) told me 'That —— Franklin County law isn't big enough to keep me from killing that ——!'" The jury looked grim. Birger, himself, first sneering, then scoffing, wilted visibly under the sound of curses fired back at him before a jury of church members.

Two Girls Point Out Hyland.

Birger listened with eyes on the floor while True, who admitted he had once been afraid of the Birger gang, gave damaging testimony. He saw two little girls point at his odd job man, Hyland, and say in steady voices: "That man over there was the one with Harry and Elmo Thomasson." An elderly pair who had been passersby at the murder scene, two young bloods of the county, a landlady, a 17-year-old youth, the brother and mother of the murdered man, followed one another to the witness stand without fear.

Six witnesses told stories, which, if believed by the jury, are enough to hang Hyland. Birger's standing before the jury seemingly was damaged by the startling bitterness with which the State depicted him as a murderous, swaggering bully.

The full force of the State's testimony has not yet turned on Birger, it shifted from Hyland late yesterday afternoon. Birger, pallid and gray, looked stunned when court recessed at 5 p. m. It is doubtful if he believed before today that men and women and children would dare say the things about him they did on the witness stand.

Newman escaped lightly. Only once did the story touch him. That was when True told of a visit paid him by two automobile loads of Birger gangsters. He said Newman was driving one of the cars, but did not leave the wheel and took no part in the threats voiced by Birger. The little gangster sat in court hour after hour without taking his chin from his hand. He seemed lost in the spectacle, his dark eyes traveling from witness to jury to Birger.

State Outlines Brazen Crime.

As presented by State's Attorney Martin through the 16 witnesses, the murder of Adams at the alleged instigation of Birger was a ruthless crime done with no attempt at concealment. The sheer brazenness of it was marked by the number of bystanders who saw the murderers pass to their work or who heard, so they said, Birger's frequent announcements that Adams would be killed.

Harry Thomasson, 19, confessed murderer, and his brother, Elmo, who he says helped him kill Adams and was afterwards murdered by Birger to seal his lips, were living at the home of Mrs. Bessie Rhodes in Benton the week of the murder.

Mrs. Bessie Rhodes took the stand.

"Elmo and Ray Hyland came to my house the morning of Dec. 12," she said, "and got Harry and Pinckney, his little brother. They drove away. That afternoon between 3:30 and 4 p. m. Harry, Elmo and this man, Hyland, returned to my house and went to Harry's room a few minutes. Then they got in their car and drove toward West City. A few minutes later I heard shots."

Adams lived in West City, a suburb of Benton, and about six blocks from Mrs. Rhodes' home.

Was Mrs. Rhodes sure she recognized Hyland, she was asked in cross examination by the defense. Yes, sir. She saw him right close. Twice she saw him. Then she had gone to the Marion jail a long time after and had picked him out from three other prisoners.

Marguerite Rhodes, 15, and Ruth, 12, were in court to say they had seen him, too. They had been playing in the yard that Sunday afternoon when the man passed.

"What man?" Do you see him in the courtroom?" each was asked.

"Yes sir. That man right over there. Sitting next to Mr. Birger."

Their fingers pointed. Children make either very good or very bad witnesses. These children were not shaken on cross-examination, answering defense counsel politely but firmly. Hyland had been six blocks from the murder scene, they said, a few minutes before the shots and had driven toward it in an automobile with the Thomasson brothers.

The State kept on the heels of the murderers. State's Attorney Martin said in his opening statement: "We intend to track with witnesses every move made by the men in the murder plot."

Saw Hyland in Murder Car.

Oliver Barell of Zeigler took the stand. He had passed the Adams home at about the time of the murder. He pointed to Hyland as the man he saw standing beside a Chrysler sedan parked near the Adams house. Shots were heard, two boys ran out and jumped in the Chrysler and Hyland drove it away, the witness testified.

Harry Belcher of Zeigler told virtually the same story, except that he had watched from the seat of his parked automobile.

Hyland's lawyer tried to make these witnesses say that they had been told by State's Attorney Martin to identify Hyland at the Marion jail, but all said they had picked out themselves. It appeared from the cross-examination that Hyland may allege mistaken identity. Harvey Dungy, another Birger gangster, resembles Hyland. Hyland's counsel, Attorney Dial, asked witnesses if they had ever seen Dungy.

Quotes Threats by Birger.

From Hyland testimony shifted quickly to Birger when True, known as "Little Shake," took the stand.

"Did Birger ever tell you he was going to kill Joe Adams?"

The gang leader, who had been studying the toe of one shoe, flushed and through narrow eyes watched True.

"Yes," True replied deliberately. Then, quoting Birger's curses with an emphasis that made the jury look slantwise at Birger, he told of two occasions on which Birger had threatened Adams life.

Gus Adams, who followed True on the stand related how the Birger gang had fired 26 bullets into his house one night, how Birger had drawn up to the curb in an automobile filled with armed gangsters and had told his brother, Joe: "You big ——! I'm going to kill you." Gus Adams also told the jury how someone had thrown a bomb in Joe Adams' yard.

The State sought to emphasize that these outrages occurred before Adaps appealed to the Shelton gang for protection. It established by testimony that Birger had threatened Adams some weeks before he asked Carl Shelton, Birger's enemy, to help him.

Crowd Clamors to Get In.

From 6 o'clock in the morning hundreds waited at the courthouse doors to get first choice of the 500 seats in the courtroom. Five times the capacity of the building clamored for admittance and the force of deputies outside had to be doubled. There was a large delegation from Herrin and Williamson County. Long lines waited in front of the doors during the afternoon, hopeful that some inside would leave and make room for them. None did. Newspapers sold out quickly and knots gathered about purchasers to hear them read aloud the accounts of the trial.

Representatives of three St. Louis afternoon newspapers, three press associations, three Chicago newspapers—the Tribune, Herald-Examiner and American—the Baltimore Sun and several country papers are reporting the trial.

Held Up While Changing Tire.

George Elkins, of 5826 Columbia avenue, was held up and robbed of $6 by three men, who drove up alongside of him as he was changing a tire, at Goodfellow and Garesche avenues, about 11 o'clock last night.

RIOTING IN VIENNA SUPPRESSED, SAYS CHANCELLOR SEIPEL

Fresh Outbreaks in Vienna Feared at Sunday Mass Meetings.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 16.—News reaching the Austrian Legation from Vienna indicates that the Social-Democratic leaders are in political control of the situation there. Police are said to have restored a tolerable measure of order.

One element of danger is now seen in the prospective mass-demonstrations on Sunday which may be swelled through an influx of workers from outside Vienna.

Thousands of foreign tourists were reported marooned in the Austrian capital for an indefinite period.

Chancellor Parleys With the Head of Socialist Party.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 16.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from Vienna says that the situation there seems to have improved.

From the welter of contradictory stories reaching here it is difficult to piece together exactly what occurred.

Apparently the workers called a strike in the morning and organized a gigantic manifestation to protest against the acquittal of soldiers tried for killing a man and a boy. They commandeered street cars, and although police did their best to control the demonstrators and on the whole succeeded, there were a number of clashes in which shots were fired on both sides. Then the mob began to be ugly.

It was soon evident it was getting out of hand altogether, and a slight incident was liable to start a large scale outbreak. This was provided by a fierce clash between police and a crowd in front of a church on the Maximilian platz.

When police tried to disperse the mob, 300 of the Platz demonstrators opened fire. Police are said to have returned the fire. Infuriated, the crowd swept them down and rushed for the Palace of Justice, bearing down all opposition. It stormed the building, cut the gas pipes, set fire to the escaping gas, and in a few minutes the building was wrapped in flames.

Judges Beaten; Papers Burned.

The Vienna correspondent of the Journal says the rioters beat and otherwise ill-used the Judges in the courts, gathered all records and documents they could lay their hands on and fed them to the flames.

Other bands, he reports, attacked the university building, Parliament House and the City Hall, with more or less success, and even began raising barricades to prevent troops being brought up.

Fighting also took place near the Opera House, which is not far from some of the leading hotels, from which, according to the correspondent of the Continental edition of the London Daily Mail, many tourists looked on.

The worst fighting seems to have been done around the City Hall. Yielding to pressure from governmental leaders, the Prefect of Police decided to rush machine guns there. These at once opened fire, several rioters being killed or wounded. It is stated that the fire was held until it was apparent the mob was going to rush the building. The square in front of the City Hall soon was littered with dead and wounded, and in a short time the interior of the building resembled a field hospital, more than 100 persons lying bleeding on the floors.

Troops Reinforce Police.

By this time police had been reinforced and detachments of troops had also arrived with machine guns.

Apart from this, some serious fighting occurred in the Lichtenfelstrasse, where, according to the Socialists, somebody fired on the crowd from a window, wounding one of the demonstrators, who collapsed. The mob thereupon stormed the house and threatened to hang a man they found in it to a lamppost. He was only saved by a hastily formed guard from the Socialist ranks.

The Vienna disturbances found no echo in the rest of the country, which, according to Vienna advices to the Havas Agency by way of Berlin, is calm.

London Correspondent Describes Police Charge on Rioters.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 16.—Relating some of the incidents he witnessed during the rioting in Vienna, the correspondent of the Daily Express says he saw one section of the mob chasing policemen down side streets and that when a policeman was caught he was killed with sticks or swords. Suddenly he heard a clatter of hoofs and a large detachment of mounted police galloped on the scene in a regular cavalry charge, whirling swords over their heads.

After a tour of the streets, the writer went to parliament house, which had been transformed into an emergency dressing station. "As I entered," he says, "a girl was led in, bandaged, and a man was carried in shot through the face. The howls of the mob outside were distinctly heard within the building.

Workers Erect Barricades.

"As the mounted police charged, workmen quickly ran motor lorries across streets, piling up ladders and building materials in improvised barricades. As the mounted police passed slashing at all who were in their way, many emerged from doorways armed with strips of planking and lead piping with which they tried to injure and fell the horses.

"Behind the mounted police came foot police. They opened a rapid fire with pistols on the demonstrators. As I stopped to take a picture, two demonstrators rolled over dead."

Situation in Vienna "Not Out of Hand," U. S. Envoy Says.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 16—A message from United States Minister Washburn, sent yesterday at 4 p m., said that the situation in Vienna at that time, was "not out of hand."

The United States Legation was under guard and there was promiscuous shooting but police were patrolling the streets.

Washburn said the riot began yesterday morning in front of the Parliament building and the Palace of Justice.

"Police fired into the crowd, many persons on both sides were wounded and several were reported killed," the message added.

NEW OLIVE CAR TRACK IN USE

Eastbound Rails in Service; Westbound Construction Begins Next Week.

Use of the new eastbound car track in Olive street, between Channing avenue and Twelfth boulevard, laid as part of the street widening project, began this afternoon. During the day, while the new track was being connected with the old at Twelfth boulevard, eastbound cars were rerouted over Twelfth to Pine street to Fourth street.

Next week construction of the new westbound track for the same distance will begin, requiring three or four weeks to finish. The work will cost the United Railways $280,000. Many spectators have commented on the speed of the construction gangs.

The train crew said the engineer had blown his whistle for the crossing. Hagan was a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hagan.

3 ROBBERS GET $1200 IN HOLDUP OF JEWELRY STORE

Armed Men Rob Brothers in Charge of Place at 4129 Manchester in Owner's Absence.

Three armed robbers, aided by a fourth who waited in an automobile, in which they made their escape, yesterday afternoon held up a jewelry store at 4129 Manchester avenue and fled with $135 in cash and $1099 worth of jewelry.

The store is owned by Charles Ziegler, but was in charge of Joseph and Jame Meagher, brothers, and friends of Ziegler, who reside above the store. The robbers forced them to lie on the floor of a rear room while they looted the cash register of $75 and the display cases of rings and watches valued at $1059. They also took a $40 stickpin from Joseph Meagher and $60 from Fred Blanner, a paper carrier of 4543 Cadet avenue, who entered while the holdup was in progress.

They backed out of the store and into the waiting machine. Joseph Meagher ran after them and fired four shots from a revolver as they drove west on Manchester avenue, but none took effect as far as is known.

publication, it was stated by former Congressman Martin C. Ansorge of New York and J. Kostman, who acted for Ford in the negotiations with Sapiro in Chicago that "Mr. Sapiro made no demand whatever for any compensation for any damages, in view of the retraction."

Sapiro expressed himself as highly satisfied at the termination of the negotiations and the retracton of both attacks upon him personally and upon co-operative marketing to which Sapiro has devoted virtually his entire legal career.

"I have suffered a very great loss personally," said Sapiro. "I still have my training in law, however, and I am going to start all over again and rebuild.

Sapiro Entirely Satisfied.

"I am glad that I have helped a great big man get right and that I have helped the Jewish people set themselves properly before the world. I also am gratified that I have helped co-operative marketing to get general support and indorsement from the leaders of thought in the United States.

"Therefore I am entirely satisfied."

In addition to the Ford representatives who acted in Chicago, the negotiations were carried on at Detroit by Clifford Langley, general counsel for the Ford interests, and Earl J. Davis, for Ford and by William Henry Gallagher, his chief of counsel for Sapiro.

United States Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, chief of counsel for Ford in the trial which ended after seven weeks in a mistrial, did not appear publicly in the negotiations.

"These negotiations have been conducted through Mr. Ford's accredited attorneys and in the exercise of his wide discretion he naturally selects those whom he feels suited for the most delicate and far-reaching negotiations," said Sapiro when asked as to the ethics of negotiating without reference to Senator Reed.

The anti-Jewish and anti-Sapiro articles printed by the Dearborn Independent appeared under the name of Harry Dunn, who was identified as Robert Morgan of Berkeley, California.

For publication of the articles, entire responsibility was accepted by William J. Cameron, managing editor of the Dearborn Independent, when he testified as the first witness in the long trial which started last March.

Settlement Effected in Negotiations Over Telephone.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., July 16.—Retraction of all personal charges against Aaron Sapiro and an indorsement of co-operative marketing are included in the terms of the settlement of the Ford-Sapiro libel suit, according to William Henry Gallagher of Detroit, chief counsel for Sapiro.

Gallagher said that the settlement as to costs was "a personal matter between the parties."

The retraction and indorsement, he said, will be issued publicly, through the Dearborn Independent, Ford's paper, in which the charges against Sapiro originally were published.

The settlement was effected by means of telephonic communication with Chicago.

Gallagher was at the Detroit end of the line with Clifford B. Langley, general counsel for the Ford Motor Co., while Sapiro and another Ford representative were at the other end.

Gallagher and Langley signed papers for the discontinuance of the law suit. These will be filed in the Federal District court here.

CHILD SUCCUMBS TO BURNS

Louis Elmendorf, 2 years old, died last night at Mullanphy Hospital of burns suffered Tuesday morning when he fell into a tub of scaling water in the basement of his home at 3934 Parnell street.

STARTS ST. LOUIS-TO-GULF SWIM TO WIN $100 WAGER

Kurt Odenheimer, Bond Salesman, Expects to Reach New Orleans Within 3 Weeks.

Kurt Odenheimer, 20 years old, walked into the Mississippi River at Olive street at 9:18 o'clock this morning and struck out for New Orleans via the swimming route. He expects to reach Cape Girardeau by nightfall.

Night before last Odenheimer and a few friends were talking about Lindbergh, and such. Somebody said nobody could swim to New Orleans. Odenheimer said he could. A friend said he couldn't and offered to back his statement with a $100 bet. Odenheimer took him up.

Odenheimer, a stock and bond salesman living at 4700 McPherson avenue, came to this country from Germany two years ago. Once in Germany, he says, he swam down the Rhine from Karlsruhe to Mannheim, about 100 miles, in 10 hours.

So, with some of his friends watching, Odenheimer took to the water, hoping to reach New Orleans in two or three weeks. He plans to spend nine or ten hours in the Mississippi each day and eat only at night. His total equipment was a two-piece swimming suit and a dollar bill, tucked in a pocket in his trunks.

SMALL PAYS STATE $650,000 TO END 6-YEAR LITIGATION

Illinois Governor Remits Amount Claimed for Unpaid Interest on Public Money.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, ..., July 16.—Gov. Len Small handed to State Treasurer Emmerson a check for $650,000 yesterday, thus closing six years of litigation over unpaid interest on State funds due since Small was State Treasurer.

Following acquittal of the Governor on charges of embezzlement, conspiracy and confidence game, and other court actions, a master in chancery was finally commissioned by the State Supreme Court to fix the amount for which the Governor was liable. The master in chancery agreed upon $1,025,434.

The action against the Governor was started by Oscar Carlstrom, Attorney-General, in 1921.

FLYER CONFESSES THAT HE BOMBED BIRGER ROADHOUSE

will make no difference. We will continue to present our case Monday.

The attempted aerial bombing on Nov. 12, 1926, of "Shady Rest," a roadhouse operated by Birger, Southern Illinois gang chieftain, added another novel weapon used in gang wars between Birger and rival Shelton gunmen.

Flying low over the roadhouse, a flyer dropped a bomb, which failed to explode. Seven or eight Birger gangsters ran out of the place and began firing at the plane with rifles and machine guns, as it circled around again and dropped two more bombs. One of them failed to explode. The other exploded in a woods 100 yards from the roadhouse. No one was injured.

The gunfire apparently did not find its mark. The plane bore no marks of identification and the pilot could not be seen plainly from the ground. When notified of the attempted bombing, Birger, who was at his home in Harrisburg, a short distance away, incensed at the new method of warfare against him, said:

"There'll be something popping off here now. They can't try that stuff on me. I'll get an airplane, if I can, and I'll use it, too."

Birger said that two men, claiming to be members of the Shelton gang telephoned him that they had bombed his place. One of the men, he said, intimated that there was a "message" for him in one of the bombs which did not explode.

The air raid apparently was in reply to an early morning visit by alleged Birger gangsters at West City, where they poured a heavy machine gun and rifle fire into two homes. One of the houses was occupied by Gus Adams, brother of Mayor Adams, who was killed by the Birger gangsters, and the other belonged to Mrs. Mary Loughman, an elderly widow. Both homes had been described by Birger as Shelton hangouts.

WITH SACCO ON DAY OF MURDER, HE SAYS

Editor of Italian Newspaper Testifies Before Governor's Inquiry Board.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, July 16.—Among the witnesses heard yesterday by Gov. Fuller's special committee investigating the Sacco-Vanzetti case was Lottie Packard, a government identification witness, who was not called to testify at the trial. She was before the committee two hours and 15 minutes. At times her voice, raised to a high pitch, could be heard by newspapermen in the anteroom.

When she came out, newspaper men attempted to interview her. She hurried away from the Governor's office, almost shouting, "I have nothing to say."

Felice Guadagni, editor of an Italian newspaper, and Albert Bosco, both defense witnesses, also appeared before the committee for a short time.

Guadagni was the first one to speak with Sacco and Vanzetti after they were arrested.

His story is that he was with Sacco in Boston the day of the payroll robbery and murder in 1920. On that day, he declared he was with Sacco between 12:30 and 1:30 at Boni's restaurant in the North End, later going with him to a coffee house in North Street. At the coffee house, Guadagni introduced Sacco to one Dentamaro. The murder occurred at 3 p. m. about 20 miles away.

Yesterday marked the beginning of the seventh year of the incarceration of Sacco and Vanzetti since their conviction. Six years ago Thursday night they were found guilty of the murder of a payroll guard at South Braintree. The jury, sitting at Delham, was out only five hours.

When the verdict was read, Sacco leaped to his feet in the iron cage in which both men were tried, and shrieked: "We are innocent!!! You kill two innocent men!!!" Vanzetti said nothing. He was calm as always. Sacco's wife, Rosina, ran to the cage, and reaching over the top of it, threw her arms about her husband, crying out hysterically. Guards tore her from him and led the prisoners back to the county jail.

POLICE ASSEMBLED TO STOP PARADE OF KU KLUX KLAN

Patrolman of Detroit Suburb Supplied With Guns, Tear Gas and Night Sticks.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, July 16. — Several hundred Deroit and Highland Park policemen were assembled at the Highland Park station today with orders to prevent an anticipated parade of the Ku Klux Klan through the streets of either city. The patrolmen were supplied with guns, tear gas, and night sticks.

Refused a permit to parade in the streets of Detroit, the klansmen here for a Michigan, Illinois, Ohio and Indiana convention, applied for a permit to parade in Highland Park. The permit was granted but was cancelled a few days later. Police claim they have been advised that the klansmen will attempt a parade, despite the prohibitory orders.

BOY KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE

Warren Brown, 5, Struck While Playing in Street.

Brown of Granite City, who was killed when struck by an automobile while playing in front of his home yesterday, will be held today. The machine which struck the boy was driven by Miss Margaret Segar, who took Warren to St. Elizabeth's Hospital. He died several hours later. Police were told the running down of the child was unavoidable.

Miss Segar was not held.

CONFERENCES ON NEW U. R. FRANCHISE END

City Officials to Issue Statement Soon on Conclusions Reached.

Conferences of the Mayor's cabinet upon the question of franchising the St. Louis Public Service Co., which on Aug. 1 is expected to buy in the United Railways at receivership sale, were concluded yesterday.

City Counselor Muench said that a statement on the administration's position with reference to the railways would be issued shortly. He declined, as did others participating in the conference, to indicate the conclusions arrived at.

There is probability that the city may elect to test again the law which places control of public utilities with the Public Service Commission with an ordinance defining the valuation of the railways and the rate of return which the administration thinks should be allowed. In that event, any franchise proposed by the administration would provide for its cancelation if courts again held the city without authority to fix fares. There also is probability that the administration will elect to send any ordinance it proposes to a direct vote of the people instead of passing it through the Board of Aldermen. Mayor Miller is said to incline to this procedure.

EXCURSION BOAT AT DOCK AT CHICAGO BOMBED; LOSS $75,000

Three Men on Board But None Hurt—Owner Attributes Act to Rival Operator.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Rivalry among operators of small shore line passenger steamers took on the aspects of competitive methods among bootleggers when a bomb sunk the North Shore, an excursion boat, as it lay at dock in Lake Michigan today. Police place responsibility for the bombing on competitors of Fred Hintz, owner.

John Hintz, son of the owner, and two members of the crew were aboar dwhen the bomb exploded. They were knocked down but not injured.

The owner told police he had been warned to "get out of the lake" and he assumed the threat came from a rival boat operator. Hintz's loss was $75,000.

FREED OF FALSE ALARM CHARGE

Alex Campbell Dismissed by Judge Gayer for Lack of Evidence.

Alex Campbell, a former member of the Salvage Corps, charged with turning in a false alarm the day after he had been laid off, was dismissed by Judge Gayer yesterday in the Court of Criminal Correction.

Judge Gayer found the evidence against Campbell insufficient. Campbell was arrested June 23, two blocks from the fire alarm box at Broadway and Wyoming street, a few minutes after someone had turned in a false alarm there. On June 22, with several other men, he had been laid off by the Salvage Corps. None of the persons near the fire alarm box was able to identify Campbell as the man who turned in the false alarm.

Flood Sufferers Handed a Lemon.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

FLOOD relief is once more in the limelight, a lime in this case being a fruit similar to a lemon. Mr. Tilson, Representative (sic) in Congress, Republican floor leader of the House, wants to do something for the flood sufferers. Since he is writing a letter to another Representative, not having a speech published in the Record, his heart does not bleed, he does not view with alarm, point with pride, or even call the flood a national calamity. (Republicans do not cansider it such.) But he fears a special session of Congress would result in half-baked legislation, and rather than half-baked legislation, this great statesman will have no legislation. He can take his legislation or let it alone. Surely one so conversant with the sins of Congress is out of place in Congress. Did I think so little of my colleagues, I should forthwith resign and aspire to the conquest of other worlds.

This peerless statesman further demands additional study on the part of engineers and others having special knowledge of the subject. The last flood, being over, is forgotten. In the meantime, the flood sufferers can starve to death. The old intellect, that so nobly sustained this leader in his castigation of Congress, sputters feebly and goes dead when it comes to methods of relief. Oh, well, flood victims in a country abounding in Republican prosperity, 10-gallon hats and euphemisms have no business starving to death. Of course, if they want to starve to death, this is a free country. Better starvation than half-baked legislation. If they have no bread, let them eat cake.

Popular "Rose Marie."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SINCE the demand for seats for "Rose Marie" cannot be filled this week, at our Municipal Theater, cannot the management be persuaded to repeat it next week instead of giving us the Mikado? The Mikado is so old that we can easily forego it and so many will be deprived of seeing "Rose Marie."

PATRON.

Work for Steam Shovels.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHEN the time comes for the city to start work on the 40-foot strip on widened Olive street, it is to be hoped that enough steam shovels will be used to attack the huge mounds of debris and fill the numerous holes, rather than that any attempt be made to do this big job of grading with pick, spade and shovel by hand. In some places we see whole blocks two or three feet above the grade of the new street car line. This is no job for old-style workers. It will require powerful machinery in order to get it done with dispatch. There will be thousands of truckloads to be hauled away, and steam shovels are the only apparatus that can tackle such a job.

I say, when the time comes. But when will it come? The thousands who ride up and down Olive street daily, and of course all the property owners and merchants now being inconvenienced and suffering loss, will rejoice when the city actually gets to work. CITIZEN.

At Delmar and Euclid.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOU had an editorial the other day on Hamilton avenue as a speedway. That is what it is. A dangerous speedway, too, both for careful motorists and pedestrians. But did you every try to cross Delmar at Euclid? There's a corner that either ought to have a stop-and-go signal or a traffic officer. It's a holy terror. DELMARITE.

Where Is Slemp?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT is a long distance from the Old Dominion to the Black Hills, and so for that and various other reasons I am not surprised nor disappointed to find no mention of C. Bascom Slemp among the visitors at Rapid City. In fact, C. Bascom has been keeping out of print for some time, practicing a self-effacement which might be commended if it were not suspicious. Just what is that sly but efficient workman, doing these long and sultry days? Is he rounding up the Southern delegates, in which specialty he has no superior and few, if any, peers?

CURIOUS.

Sunday for Rest.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IS it fair to make grocery stores close on Sunday and allow pressing shops, shoeshining parlors and hat cleaners to open? In the opinion of this writer the grocery store is more essential to public welfare any day than the hat shop, pressing shop and shining parlor all combined. And yet all of them should be closed on Sunday.

We lose when we do work on Sunday that should have been done Saturday—rest, recreation, time and energy are lost.

WILLIAM D. EDWARDS.

A BAD BARGAIN.

Comptroller Nolte says he would go a long way to collect the mill tax arrears, now aggregating some $3,000,000, which seems to supply the principal motive of the Miller administration in trying to railroad through the Board of Aldermen the proposed street railway franchise. That is, though the city recently collected more than $2,000,000 in back taxes from the banks, it is so hard up that for immediate relief it would tie the community up for 30 years willy nilly.

Thus the cupidity of the city hall, as the reorganizers very well knew it would, induces the administration to haste in a matter which ought to be given the utmost consideration. Apparently no effort has been made to ascertain what part of the mill tax claim the city will get when the receivership ends, irrespective of the franchise grant. It is likely that this may be as much as $1,000,000. Therefore, it is for approximately $2,000,000 that the administration would sell the city out, enrich the reorganizers and tie the municipality up for 30 years with a type of transportation which may not, for all anybody knows, stand the test of another decade.

It is hard to imagine a worse motive for making a municipal contract. The franchises of the street railways still have 12 years to run. The lines are in excellent condition, and are making money. In the eight years of the receivership their profits have averaged more than $1,000,000 a year. There is no reason for giving them a new franchise at this time except that Mr. Newman and his associates would like to make a few millions spot cash, and the City Hall would like to ease its financial woes by putting mill tax payments of $500,000 a year into the treasury. If the deal fails, street car service will not suffer in the least. It will continue operating and make money. The only disappointed persons will be the reorganizers, who admit that without the franchise their speculative profits would be deferred.

The Post-Dispatch is opposed to exploiting the community, either to enrich the reorganizers of the street railway system or to collect an overdue debt, by tieing the city up for 30 years for the benefit of speculators. It cannot believe that the Board of Aldermen is going to lend itself to any such job. It is madness to give so much for nothing better than a repetition of promises made eight years ago to pay a just debt. If the promise made to Mayor Kiel to pay the mill tax in exchange for validation of a franchise in 1919 was not kept after the validation was granted, how much better is the similar promise to Mayor Miller?

ST. CHARLES BRIDGE.

Not quite a year has elapsed since Probate Judge Sam D. Hodgdon and his committee cut the Gordian knot to free the bridge over the Missouri at St. Charles. There was a good deal of criticism over the contract by which the owners of the bridge were to receive $1,250,000, this to come out of bridge tolls, but we thought at the time and still think it was largely petty or theoretical.

Already the books show that more than $200,000 have been collected toward the purchase price, and it seems likely that the original estimate, namely, that the bridge will pay for itself in from 5 to 7 years, was correct. Satisfaction with the working out of the plan is to be expressed on Aug. 1 at a public celebration in St. Charles.

Admittedly there were better ways to rid U. S. Highway 40 of the anachronism of a toll bridge, notably its condemnation and purchase by the State. But that had not been done and no one knows when it would be done. In default of State action, private initiative did the best it could, and that was pretty good.

Whatever else that is said about it, St. Charles bridge is now well on its way to freedom.

HIS MAJESTY, BOBBY JONES.

That crown of Golfer Incomparable which Oakmont's lacerated traps and pneumatic greens had all but removed again adorns the head of Bobby Jones, and with a livelier luster than it ever flashed before. The restoration occurred at that shrine of shrines, St. Andrews, which vests the ceremonial with the accolade of finality.

This performance of Bobby's was a masterpiece in which the Angelos, Titians, Da Vincis and all the other gods of golf might have collaborated. Feast on the dithyrambic figures, the chaste, immaculate dope. Seventy-two holes in 285. An average of less than four strokes. Contemplate the radiant rounds. First, 68; second, 72; third, 73; fourth, 72. Hyperbole has no tributes to bestow. This is painting the lily, plating the platinum, dolling up Diana. Bobby made par look like a dubster. Bobby was pluperfect.

The fairways of St. Andrews are storied trails. They are the Via Gloriosa and Via Dolorosa of the ancient game. The great have passed that way and left their legacy of achievement to confound the pretenders to the throne and try the skill and soul and courage of the royal line. Bobby has proved his lineage. He has eclipsed them all. He is imperator, rex, generalissimo, a bird, a pippin and a wow.

"SANE ENFORCEMENT."

The new chief of prohibition enforcement, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman, has announced his policy in a statement which will appeal favorably to the country's common sense. Sane enforcement is his keynote. He intends to enforce this law as other laws are enforced, "in a businesslike, dignified manner." The under-cover man, the agent provocateur, the sensational raider, drunk with authority and hungering for notoriety, will no longer offend public decency and antagonize public sentiment. They are through.

It may be pointed out that this announcement is essentially the same in spirit as that of Mr. Lowman's predecessor, Gen. Andrews. Yet the Andrews administration was a failure, both as regards reforming the character of the service and in the results obtained. But Gen. Andrews was handicapped by the hostility of the Anti-Saloon League, which never approved him or his methods and which diluted his authority by its insistence on the retention of the grotesque Haynes on the payroll. In consequence the morale of the service was impaired. Moreover, the objectionable strategy and tactics persisted under Andrews.

Mr. Lowman, as a professed and practicing dry, is persona grata to the Anti-Saloon League. He is not the league's first choice for the place (the gushing Haynes is still the favorite), but he will not be harassed by the malevolent political maneuvering of Mr. Wheeler and the whole Westerville crowd. He will, in all probability, have a fair opportunity to try out his policy of enforcing the dry law legally and with proper regard for the Constitution as a whole and for the people's deeply cherished traditions. Win or lose, Mr. Lowman will command popular respect if he adheres faithfully to his platform.

THE ZONING TRAGEDY.

As it well might have done, sadness tempered whatever joy the community felt in the victory of the zoning ordinance. It was a sadness induced by the conviction that the first zoning ordinance was constitutional but the State Supreme Court did not know it. The court let the people whose motive was to exploit the residence districts tell it that this was in contravention of the rights of property, whereas the rights of home owners to protect their property from merely material invasion was always entirely constitutional.

The Supreme Court knows that now, but it did not know it until the United States Supreme Court had warned all the state courts that cities have the right to restrict the uses to which property can be put. Unfortunately, in the years while our own State court was finding this out some of the finest residence districts in St. Louis were virtually ruined by apartments, stores, garages and filling stations. For that estheticism which the zoning ordinance proposed we had a reign of pigglywigglyism. It is with a sinking heart that the community realizes now how unnecessary this was. Had the city only had the courage to carry its fight to the United States Supreme Court, as the pugnacious little city of Euclid, O., did, it could have beaten the exploiters of exclusive residence neighborhoods in St. Louis and have got the first ordinance sustained. There is no actual difference between the first and the second ordinances. The State court held the first illegal because it did not contain a compensation clause, but after the impressive imprimatur of the United States Supreme Court had set it aright it sustained the second ordinance without a compensation clause. It was the court's opinion that changed, not the ordinance.

This is the penalty we pay for not caring who are on the State supreme bench. We are so indifferent to its personnel that when there is an election we do not know how to vote. In the last State election the race was between a man and a virtual youth. It was only by ringing the very fire bells that the people were aroused to a realization that a very young man, whatever his qualifications, is not equipped to sit on the supreme bench.

If you will go through the residence districts of St. Louis, particularly those in the West End, you will be able to visualize what it cost us, when the first zoning ordinance came up, to have a State Supreme Court that did not know whether the ordinance was constitutional or not.

VALE HOB NOB.

The Hob Nob cafe on Twelfth street, noted for its imported frankfurters and sauer kraut, has finally succumbed to prohibition. Like Caesar's old bar and restaurant in the lower end of town, which also died recently, it was a delightful place to eat and drink. One by one the landmarks of a brighter and wetter era disappear from the downtown section as the boys who once lined up at the bar now guzzle raspberry ice cream sodas and munch ladyfingers at the soda fountain.

IS HE THE FORDHAM FLASH?

No doubt you have heard Jascha Heifetz play the violin. It is quite possible you have seen Bill Tilden play tennis, Bobby Jones play golf, young Jake Schaefer at billiards, Johnny Weismuller in swimming, Forbes-Robertson as "Hamlet," Lillian Russell in tights and Cal Coolidge in a cowboy costume. But if you haven't seen Frankie Frisch play baseball, you ain't seen nothing or been nowhere. Listen to this from the Post-Dispatch report of Wednesday's game:

> Leach led off the Phils' half of the twelfth with a line drive over Frisch's head. The ball was hit hard. Frisch leaped for it, batted it high or rather higher into the air with his gloved hand, and with another backward leap caught the ball just before he hit the ground, flat on his back. He held the ball up where the umpires, and all the world, might see it, and there was no question of the catch. Observers who have been watching games for more than 20 years said they had never seen a catch like the one Frisch made.

If Ulysses had done that, Homer would have added another canto to the Odyssey.

AGUINALDO'S PERSONAL TRAGEDY.

A little more than a quarter of a century ago, Aguinaldo was the very symbol of militant patriotism. He was the Garibaldi of the Orient. It was he who led the Filipinos in their hopeless insurrection against the United States after the Spanish War. If ever a man looked the part of an unreconstructed and unreconstructable rebel, it was this same fiery Emilio. He caused us lots of worry, but we admired him as a man who desired the freedom of his own country above everything.

We now chronicle the fact that the volcano that was Aguinaldo is now extinct. A dispatch from Manila yesterday quoted Aguinaldo as saying:

> Our position in the Pacific, surrounded by jealous Powers and our necessity of American protection, make desirable that the War Department continue administration.

This, you may think, sounds like Gen. Wood. It does not merely sound like him. It is he. Aguinaldo the terrible has become a tame henchman of the War Department clique. He has become Gen. Wood's yes-man.

A warrior in his youth. A fawning politico in his old age. That's Aguinaldo's personal tragedy.

Overnight Mrs. McPherson became a national figure and an incident which might have been expected to ruin her career as a teacher of the gospel instead catapulted her into fame and fortune. She is now more greatly in demand than she ever was in her life. Watson, what do you and Dr. Freud make of this case?

GAME REFUGES IN MISSOURI.

From the Missouri Game and Fish News.

AS a result of the passage of the auxiliary game refuge bill by the recent Legislature, which bill was at the recommendation of the State Game and Fish Department and provides for the establishing of game refuges with public shooting grounds in connection therewith, Keith McCanse, State Game and Fish Commissioner, left Jefferson City June 6 for Pennsylvania where he spent several weeks in the hands of the Pennsylvania Game Department making an inspection of the game refuges of that State.

It is through the game refuge system that Pennsylvania has been brought to the front as a leader among the States of the Union from the standpoint of wild game. Particularly have deer, wild turkey and bear shown great increases. Rapid progress has also been made with smaller game, such as quail, pheasants and rabbits.

The forest areas of Missouri are as extensive as those of Pennsylvania. In fact both of these states have in excess of 14,000,000 acres of land in forest. This is about one-third of the area of the State of Missouri. Opportunities, therefore, for the development of forest game such as deer, turkey, etc., are as great in Missouri as in Pennsylvania.

Auxiliary refuges are different from the regular game refuges in that the regular refuges are on State-owned lands and auxiliary refuges are on the lands of others, leased by the State for a period of not less than 10 years.

The Commissioner is deeply interested in the establishment of game refuges in every district in the State, and since his return June 25, printed requirements with a detailed explanation of the conditions governing the establishments of these refuges have been issued. Blank applications can be had from the department, but Mr. McCanse states that no refuges will be selected unless there can be public hunting grounds connected thereto. In other words, the department does not intend to establish private game refuges, and the sites must be amply large for public hunting in addition to the refuge proper.

The co-operation of sportsmen's organizations in the selection of these auxiliary refuges and public hunting grounds is desired, and individual sportsmen as well, who are interested, should communicate with the department.

SHORT AND SENSIBLE.

From the Kansas City Star.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S first speech, made in Sangamon County, Illinois, in 1832, was short and sensible. He was then a Whig and a candidate for the State Legislature. The speech was brief for two reasons: previous speakers had taken up most of the time and about exhausted the political discussion, and Lincoln was young and somewhat timid. The speech, as reported to W. H. Herndon, historian, by one who heard it, follows:

"Gentlemen, Fellow Citizens: I presume you all know who I am. I am humble Abraham Lincoln. I have been solicited by many friends to become a candidate for the Legislature. My politics are short and sweet, like an old woman's dance. I am in favor of a national bank, I am in favor of the internal improvements system and a high protective tariff. These are my sentiments and political principles. If elected, I shall be thankful; if not, it will be all the same."

A WASHERWOMAN IN JAIL.

From the Omaha World-Herald.

TWO Federal agents, two policemen and a constable swooped down, in the name of this mighty republic and this sovereign State, upon the modest home of a Lincoln washerwoman the other day. They found that her neighbors had given the right tip, for 15 gallons of wine, a gallon of alcohol and a small still were found in the basement. Now, from her place behind iron bars, Mrs. Kate Johnson deposes and says as follows, to-wit:

> I've cleaned house and done washings for lots of folk in Lincoln, and, believe me, they had more beer and wine, and even whisky, in their cellars than I ever had.

There can be no doubt about that. Everybody knows it is true. Everybody knows, too, why the washerwoman goes to jail while the people in whose homes she toils are unmolested in the enjoyment of their lawless special privilege.

In the first place she is poor and obscure while they, relatively or actually, are rich and influential. In the second place she sells some of her product—the song of the shirt is a weary song, and it is easier and more profitable to make and sell wine and hooch than to bend all day long over a washboard—while they only buy theirs for their own use and enjoyment and the entertainment of their friends. And, according to the new code of law and ethics we have established, it is more sinful, and a greater menace to the social organism, to make and sell than to buy and use.

This is not a curse; it is a blessing in disguise. Time was when a vaudeville actor could have his little joke about prohibition. That was stopped; managers decided that prohibition is sufficiently a joke. The mother-in-law was banned. Now comes the most unkindest cut of all. The manager of the Keith Albee theaters has ordered actors to cease insinuating that street railway service is the imperfect thing it is on this admittedly imperfect mundane sphere. He says quips on trolley service are neither comedy nor entertainment. Does Mr. Newman attend vaudeville shows? Where next will this hideous monster of censorship rear its ugly head? We give up the unequal struggle for free speech. We hope that manager has to wait for a street car some time. And if you think street car service sometimes is funny, column conductors do not work for the street railway, nor for managers of vaudeville circuits.—(Advt.)

"Of Making Many Books"
JOHN G. NEIHARDT

Prodigies of Love

THE PRODIGIOUS LOVER. By Louis Barthou, former Premier of France. Translated from the French by Henry Irving Brock. Duffield.

IT is probable that thousands of people who have no interest whatever in the music of Wagner and would greatly prefer to hear the latest "Blues," have enjoyed and will yet enjoy this study of a great musical genius from the viewpoint of his erotic exploits. That is fame. Such a study is not only flattering to mediocrity, since it presents a superior personality in a disadvantageous light, but it also harmonizes nicely with the literary vogue for representing human beings as hardly more than perambulating sex mechanisms.

The subtitle of the book is "New Aspects in the Life of Richard Wagner." New to whom? one wonders; for though Wagner's various love-affairs are here presented with rather more attention to minor details than is usual, the love-affairs themselves are well known and have been these many years.

There is the pitiful story of the marriage with Minna, who certainly deserved a better fate. There is the somewhat mawkish philandering with Mathilde Wessendonck, wife of a generous benefactor upon whose bounty Wagner was dependent. There are various minor exploits, such as those with Jessie and the other Mathilde, which, in Byron's words, may be described as "not quite adultery—but adulteration." And there is the final union with Cosima, Liszt's illegitimate daughter, wife of Wagner's too trusting friend and passionate admirer, Hans von Buelow. The latter seems to have been the champion cuckold of his day, apparently remaining blissfully unconscious of his horns for a considerable time after the world in which he moved had seen them clearly enough.

There is no reason why such facts in a great man's private life should be omitted from an exhaustive biography, for they are important when presented in their proper relations, and they do serve to throw light upon much of the master's musical activity. But to select only such details of a man's life, displaying them to the world "at one fell swoop," "like garden gods, and not so decent either," is to create a false perspective.

Furthermore, to represent Wagner's affairs with women as prodigies of errotic valor is absurd. "Prodigious lovers" are not at all rare, as police and divorce court records prove. It is not because Wagner lacked self-control, playing cuckoo in the shielding nests of his friends, that he deserves the love and admiration of men; for surely the conception of honor is one of the finest products of the human spirit. But it is because he revealed beauty; and if one man's honor be the necessary price for such a revelation, no doubt it is well, in the long run, to buy.

But as for "prodigious lovers," many a husky lout in the slums makes Wagner look like a blue-nosed Puritan.

FRENCH SOCIETY IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. By Louis Ducros. Putnam.

An intimate study of French social life during the period that led up to the French Revolution. It is concerned not only with Louis the Well-Beloved and his Court, but also with the ordinary life of Paris and the Provinces, the country gentleman, the soldier and professional man, the bourgeois and the peasant.

BERBERS AND BLACKS. By Gen. David P. Barrows. Century.

An account of travels across the heart of Africa, containing much information about that part of the continent which is least known to white men.

UNQUENCHABLE FIRE. By Joan Sutherland. Harpers.

The central figure of this story is John Ingram, a brilliant and eccentric artist, whose genius dominates the New York theater world.

A life-size portrait bust in bronze of Charles A. Lindbergh by Sach De Paris, a prominent young French sculptor who has just arrived in New York is now on display in the windows of G. P. Putnam's Sons, publishers of Lindbergh's book, "We." This bust was completed in 33½ hours, the exact time required for Lindbergh's trans-Atlantic flight to Paris. Preparatory to the actual modeling, the young sculptor had been given the freedom of the American Embassy to study Lindbergh, but since the bust was to be a surprise, actual posing was impossible. M. de Paris therefore experimented with a new method of portrait study which he believes will completely eliminate the tedious poses which made portraiture in the past so difficult a task. He photographed Lindbergh with the slow-motion camera and used the shots so taken, in all their various angles, to help him get the character expressions necessary for an accurate likeness.

MRS. RICHARD M. CADWALADER BUILDS $2,000,000 YACHT

Philadelphia Woman Will Own What Probably Will be Largest Pleasure Boat in the World.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 16.—At a cost of $2,000,000, a yacht rivaling smaller ocean liners in size, and probably the largest pleasure craft in the world, is being built for Mrs. Richard M. Cadwalader of Philadelphia, it was announced yesterday. Mrs. Cadwalader, is a descendent of John A. Roebling, builder of the Brooklyn Bridge.

With a displacement tonnage of 2450 tons the yacht will surpass any American owned yacht in size. It will be larger than James Gordon Benett's famous The Lysistrata, which was of 1946 tons. The Lysistrata was sold to the Russian Government for hospital work in 1916.

Equipped with the newest type of propulsion Diesel engines—the yacht is expected to make 17 knots. The contract calls for delivery Jan. 15.

PENETRATES SAHARA WILDS

French Geologist Travels 300 Miles Into Unexplored Region.

ALGIERS, Algeria, July 16.—Conrad Kilian, young French geologist, is the hero of a daring exploit in a hitherto unexplored section of the Sahara. With a native —Tuareg—and a small fleet of camels carrying equipment, he made his way southwest from Tamanrasset, French military post, in the mountainous Hoggar region.

For fourteen days he journeyed more than 300 miles of "no man's land," never before visited by a foreigner. The travel proved too exhausting to the camels which died of hunger, thirst and fatigue. The explorers were finally forced to tramp back with a mariner's compass as their only guide. Kilian, son of a member of the Institute of Paris, is noted for his geological expeditions in the Sahara.

PROGRESS REPORTED IN MOTION PICTURE ECONOMY CONFERENCE

No Suggestion Advanced Affects Quality of Productions, Goldwyn Says.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, July 16.—Progress toward a solution of the excessive cost of producing motion pictures was announced today by spokesmen for producers and writers after a conference between the two branches of the industry.

Samuel Goldwyn, producer, said that "in all the suggestions advanced so far, there has been none aiming at a reduction of the quality of pictures."

The conference was one of a series in working out an agreement by which a proposed wage cut in the industry was postponed until Aug. 1 in hope that other economy methods might be discovered.

Rupert Hughes, novelist and scenario writer, gave his diagnosis from the standpoint of the writer.

"Any story is better when it is told by one man, than when the bystanders break in," explained Hughes. "In the movies the author has his story taken away from him. He is locked out while a gang of butchers cut the heart out of it; then they fight one another in putting it together again."

DEMANDS K. C. SOUTHERN GIVE UP CONTROL OF TWO ROADS

Opponent of Southwest Merger Asks Line to Sell Its M.-K.-T. and "Cotton Belt" Holdings.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 16.—The Kansas City Southern Railway has been notified by R. C. Duff, president of the Waco, Beaumont, Trinity & Sabine Railway Co., that his road and other interests opposing the Southwest merger "expect and require that the Kansas City Southern shall at once dispose of its holdings of stock of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas and St. Louis-Southwestern railroads and relinquish control of and withdraw from the boards of the two companies directors elected in the interest of the Kansas City Southern."

The claim is made that the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission on May 19 held that the three systems were strong competitors, and "that the neutral effect of control of the two roads by the Kansas City Southern will be to lessen, if not destroy competition between the three roads."

POWERS 100,000 TONS APART ON NAVAL PROPOSALS

Tension at Arms Conference Seems Lessened—British Minimize Value of Large Cruisers.

U. S. AND JAPAN FOR 10,000-TONNERS

British Point Out That Some Ships Built During War Cannot be Used in Tropics.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, July 16.—As the situation appeared today, the week-end promised to bring some easing of the position in which the three Powers participating in the naval limitation conference found themselves.

There is still more than 100,000 tons difference between Great Britain's minimum tonnage for cruisers and the maximum of the United States, and about 100,000 tons between the American maximum and that of Japan.

The British, in view of the stand of the United States and Japan for the maintenance of 10,000-ton cruisers armed with eight-inch guns, are citing the testimony of their shipbuilders and engineers to show that craft of such displacement are unreliable, often unseaworthy, hard to equip and long in getting off the ways.

Apart from being united in seeking to limit the number of 10,000-ton cruisers of the United States and Great Britain to 10, the British and Japanese delegates are agreed on a plan of not scrapping all old cruisers when they are replaced by new ones. They contend such vessels could be kept for coast defense patrol and convoy duty.

American circles are not disposed to accept this plan. It is pointed out that all American cruisers in commission, except those of the Omaha class, will be at least 20 years old next year, and thus would be of little use under the plan.

A British spokesman emphasized that their cruiser problem is complicated by the fact that during the World War Great Britain built a number of vessels for scouting and patrolling in the North Sea. These vessels have been found useless for the Navy's general peace-time work in other waters.

For example, if such ships were to operate in the Red Sea, the Persian Gulf or the Indian Ocean, larger and cooler quarters would have to be provided for their crews. These overhaulings, it was stated, would cause a considerable increase in tonnage.

LEVINE EXPECTS DROUHIN TO PILOT COLUMBIA PLANE

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 16.—"I still expect to make the Paris-New York flight with Maurice Drouhin as pilot," said Charles Levine, the American who is sponsoring the projected flight, this morning. This was by way of a denial of the report that he was negotiating with British flyers to pilot his plane.

"They say I am keeping Drouhin waiting for his contract," continued Levine. "We already have signed one contract that might be called a 'tentative contract.' Drouhin was to bring in another one drawn up by his lawyer. When it arrives we will sign it, if it is all right, and that will settle it, but it won't be for $150,000. There are too many aviators on the market to justify that kind of price."

Levine said it would take a month to put his plane, the Columbia, in shape, and then it would be a question of the weather. He added that at the first favorable moment the Columbia would take the air for New York with Drouhin as pilot.

EUROPE'S ECONOMIC STATE BEST SINCE WAR, DR. KLEIN SAYS

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 16.—Europe's economic outlook is better at present than at any time since the war, not only in material progress, but also in promotion of a spirit of comity among the nations, in the opinion of Dr. Julius Klein, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the United States Department of Commerce.

"The great hazard that still remains to be overcome is the mental hazard," said Dr. Klein.

Dr. Klein said he believed the foundation of Europe's post-war economic and industrial life was firmer and better adapted to bear the burdens of changed conditions than a few years ago.

Veterans Plan Trip to France.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., July 16.—Plans for a pilgrimage to France in 1928 to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the Champagne, St. Mihiel and Argonne battles were launched by the veterans of the Rainbow Division at their annual reunion here. An invitation to Paris or Nancy, France has been received from the French Government. A delegation from Columbus, O., was making a strong bid to keep the convention in America for another year.

DR. EDMUND VON MACH, 56, GERMAN PROPAGANDIST, DIES

Promoted Unsuccessful Plans for Peace Conference at Washington in 1917.

By the Associated Press.

BANGOR, Me., July 16.—Dr. Edmund von Mach, 56 years old, prominent German propagandist, died yesterday at the Eastern Maine General Hospital after an operation.

Dr. Edmund von Mach was one of the prime movers in a projected peace conference to have been held at Washington, April 2, 1917, but which failed to materialize.

He came to this country in 1891 after serving two years in the German army. He was graduated from Harvard University in 1895 and was instructor in fine arts at Harvard from 1899 to 1902, and instructor in the history of art at Wellesley from 1899 to 1902. He later was lecturer on art at Vassar College.

From the outbreak of the World War he became an active worker in Germany's cause. He wrote pamphlets which were widely distrifuted and delivered addresses in which he assailed President Wilson's policies.

In 1916 he started a campaign to send milk to infants in Germany but a request to Secretary of Navy Daniels that a naval vessel be sent to Germany with milk was refused.

His activities ceased with entrance of the United States into the war, but after its close he charged in a pamphlet called "The Horror of the Rhine" that French colonial troops were being foisted upon the German residents of occupied territory.

MARRIAGE BY CHICAGO SCHOOL TEACHERS LEADS TO DISPUTE

Thompson Appointee Threatens to Discharge Women Who Wed; Plan Denounced.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 16.—The word war between Mayor Thompson's administration and William McAndrew, Superintendent of Schools, today had veered from anti-American propaganda charges and denial thereof, to matrimony for a subject.

J. Lewis Coath, school board president and Thompson appointee, made known that he is conducting an investigation to determine whether the efficiency of school teachers who acquire husbands is thereby impaired. If he finds it is, the school board head is prepared to make marriage an automatic cause for discharge from the teaching force. Superintendent McAndrew denounced the plan as discriminatory and impractical.

"Teachers," he said, 'can be dismissed only after a trial and proof of unfit conduct or unfitness. Is marriage a misdemeanor? Who is going to try these teachers for getting married? And how about the men teachers?"

ST. LOUISAN DENIED ORDER TO INSPECT SAFE DEPOSIT BOX

Mrs. Kathryn Leonori Is Seeking Information on Extent of Late Husband's Estate.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Mrs. Kathryn Leonori of St. Louis yesterday was denied a court order permitting her to inspect a safe deposit box at the Chase Safe Deposit Co., rented by her late husband, Charles L. Leonori.

Mrs. Leonori contended contents of the box would prove Leonori left an estate of more than $100,000, instead of $3000, as estimated by his sons by a previous marriage, Clifford U. and Charles L. Leonori Jr.

Leonori, a hotel proprietor, died last June. A will filed in St. Louis left his estate to the two sons. His widow is suing to set aside this will in favor of an earlier will, under which she shared the estate with her stepsons.

The Rev. Patrick H. O'Regan, 91 years old, formerly of St. Louis, died yesterday of pneumonia in Los Angeles. He ranked as the oldest priest in the Vincentian order.

From 1893 until 1907, he was connected with the old Kenrick Seminary on Cass avenue, being vice president part of the time. For the last 17 years he had been chaplain at St. Vincent's Hospital in Los Angeles. He is survived by seven nieces and nephews in St. Louis and a sister in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Movies Take Ford Off Program.

A news reel showing Henry Ford and his son, Edsel, inspecting an airplane, followed by an excerpt from Ford's apology to the Jews, was removed from the program at the West End Lyric and Lyric Skydome motion picture theaters after four Jewish customers of the former theater complained to the manager. The customers said they considered the reel an advertisement for the coming new Ford.

CANADA HOLDS BACK ON DEEP WATERWAY

Premier Notifies Kellogg He Must Wait for Final Report of Engineers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The Canadian Government still is unready to proceed with negotiation of a convention with the United States for the joint development of the St. Lawrence River deep waterway, which has been under discussion between the two governments since 1909.

In a note dated July 12 and made public last night by agreement, the Canadian Premier, MacKenzie King, notified Secretary Kellogg that his Government would not be in a position to undertake the negotiations, suggested in an American note of April 13, until the final report of the joint engineering board including the appendices, had been received and studied by the Canadian national advisory commission.

The American note reviewed the appointment in 1924 of the St. Lawrence River Commission, headed by Secretary Hoover for the United States, and the Canadian Advisory Committee headed by George Perry Graham, minister of railways and canals, for Canada, and declared:

"The representatives of the two countries differed as to a few details but from the report it clearly appears that the improvement of the waterway for navigation and power purposes is both feasible and advisable."

U. S. Adopts Report.

The note added that Secretary Hoover's commission had examined all aspects of the proposals and concluded that construction of the waterway was desirable, recommending that negotiations be opened with the Canadian Government to that end.

"The Government of the United States adopts the recommendation of the St. Lawrence Commission," the American communication added. . . . "In view of the action already taken by both governments, it is apprehended that they are in accord on the principle that the project should be taken. If this Government's conclusion in this respect be correct, there only remains to be effected an understanding as to the methods and means for its earliest accomplishment. . . .

"This Government is prepared to enter into negotiations with a view to the formulation of a convention appropriate to this subject."

The Canadian reply pointed out that the report of the joint board of engineers, signed Nov. 16, 1926, "while unanimous in many respects, indicated differences of opinion on important phases of the development proposed."

Alternative Schemes.

"It is understood that in the appendices to the report," the Canadian note continued, "which are in preparation, certain further alternative schemes will be presented which will be of essential value in arriving at a conclusion."

The note added that when the Canadian Government had received the report of its advisory committee and studied other factors involved it would be "able to determine its policy on the question" and be then ready to enter into discussion with the United States.

MARIE PREVOST AND HARLAN AGREE ON DIVORCE TERMS

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 16.—Marie Prevost, film star, and her husband, Kenneth Harlan, also of the screen, have taken the first step toward making their separation final by signing a property agreement. They separated several weeks ago.

The signing of the agreement yesterday is announced by Ivon Parker, business representative of the pair. At a time, as yet undecided, Miss Prevost will file suit for divorce, Parker declared.

Most of the property of the film stars has been kept separate since their marriage, and division of that property was unnecessary. The agreement signed, however, gives Miss Prevost the Beverly Hills home where they had lived.

32 ARRAIGNED AFTER BELLEVILLE DRY RAIDS

All but Two Give Bond — Five Others Sought on Federal Warrants.

Thirty-two men, arrested in Federal prohibition raids in Belleville yesterday, were given hearings before a United States Commissioner at East St. Louis late in the afternoon, and all but two, who were unable to furnish bail, were released on $3000 bonds.

Most of them face combined charges of alleged sale and possession of liquor and maintenance of common nuisances, but some are charged only with sale or possession. The agents have warrants for five more men who were not found yesterday.

The concerted raids, the most comprehensive visitation dry agents have made at Belleville, were based on evidence gathered during the last month by 12 "under cover" operatives. They visited saloons and alleged "home-brew joints" in residences to buy drinks, posing as tourists, miners, linemen and salesmen. Four of them utilized German to ingratiate themselves with bartenders. They reported having bought liquor in 39 places all of which were raided yesterday under search warrants.

Alleged illicit liquor—moonshine, homebrew, brandy, wine and gin, valued by the agents at $20,000 to $25,000—was reported found in 35 of the places. Some of the bottles bore bogus labels of well-known pre-prohibition brands, but the contents was only colored and flavored alcohol. Stocks of homebrew beer, much of it iced for service, ranged from a few dozen bottles to one supply of 2500 pints. After samples were taken for evidence the rest was destroyed.

Some one a few weeks ago mailed a clipping from a Belleville newspaper to prohibition headquarters at Washington. It told about prevalence of illicit liquor sales in the St. Clair County seat. Yesterday's raids resulted. They were directed by Prohibition Administrator John B. Madden of Springfield, Ill., who commanded 26 agents, essembled from St. Louis(East St. Louis and Springfield. They swooped into Belleville at 9:10 a. m. and required about four hours for the raids. The prisoners were taken to the East St. Louis Federal Building on a special trolley car.

Those arrested were: Chester Powers and Henry Rapp, who did not furnish bail, and Leonard Rinehardt, Arthur Bauman, Adam Maurer, George Weisner, Herbert Kaltenbrown, Fred Joenlenbach, Alex Schmidt, William Klein, Charles Acker, Richard O. Poirot, William F. Florence, Fred Schau, John Graf, August Ehret, Roy J. Krodell, Joseph Large, Joseph Large Jr., John Semran, Tom R. Davis, Ed Engelage, Earl Roedesheimer, Walter Dittle, Henry Dittle, William Mentzer, Alec Meyer, George A. Vickers, John Auer, Charles Haugsleben Jr., George Kardinsky and Rupert Goehmann.

Four of the same prohibition agents set out last midnight to find a still on the bluff west of Belleville and south of State street. They discovered it in operation at 3 o'clock this morning and arrested three men who said they were Joe Machino of 703 North Seventh street, Tony Bommarito of 1105 North Seventh street and Joe Lafata of 1114 North Seventh street, all St. Louis addresses. Machino, the agents declared, admitted he owned the still, which had 200 gallons daily capacity. The agents confiscated 255 gallons of alcohol and today planned to destroy 40,000 gallons of mash there.

WHEAT CLOSES HIGHER ON THE CHICAGO BOARD

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Recurrence of uneasiness over black rust put the wheat market on the upgrade today. Revival of threatening rust reports came from both sides of the Canadian boundary, with some Manitoba advices telling of black rust on wheat stems. Corn crop advices today were favorable, but the corn market declines were largely overcome by wheat strength. Wheat closed firm, 1⅛c to 1⅝c net higher, corn unchanged to ⅝c off, oats ⅛@¼c to ½c down, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to a rise of 10c.

Announcement today by one of the unofficial crop observers that South Dakota weather had made a quick shift to conditions perfect for development of black rust gave something of shock to wheat traders today, and did much to bring about upturns in price despite earlier setbacks. The observer who sent the black rust news was careful to add that he did not consider the situation alarming.

It was further explained that around Bradley, S. D., where threatening black rust news came from today the growing wheat is fully 10 days later than in the big wheat territory of the Red River Valley. On the other hand, according to a statement issued by the Rust Prevention Association, most of the South Dakota crop and that in the southern part of North Dakota is virtually made and is out of the way of rust damage.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 16—The stock market displayed a firm undertone today despite rather extensive week-end readjustment of speculative accounts. Owing to the absence of many large traders, business was in relatively small volume, the day's sales aggregating about 650,000 shares.

Rails again assumed the leadership of the market with Erie common, which crossed 60 to a new peak, as the individual feature. Delaware & Hudson, which sold off sharply toward the close yesterday, rallied 2½ points and Frisco common, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago Northwestern and Southern Railway all sold a point or so higher. Buying of the rails has been based on expectation of improved earnings through further operating economies and increased freight traffic this fall, as well as by hopes of official approval of pending railroad consolidations.

Standard industrials held fairly steady, although Baldwin was again subjected to profit-taking. General Electric took on a new lease of life and good buying was apparent in Coco Cola and Atlantic Refining. There were a few soft spots, the most conspicuous being Nash Motors and American Smelting.

The closing was firm.

Dun's Weekly Review.

NEW YORK, JJuly 16.—Dun's today says:

"Allowing for the season, which normally is the quietest of a year business displays considerable vigor, although its irregularities have not diminished. Extreme heat in the East and in most other sections has affected the situation in different ways, causing a further let-down in some manufacturing activities, but quickening the consumption of summer merchandise and reducing such stocks. The purchases arising from the vacation period also have gained momentum, and the larger number of retailers in some of the primary markets indicates that supplies in numerous instances require replenishment. It has been the frequent repeating of moderate-sized orders in various lines that has kept the aggregate of dealings at a comparatively high level and the fact that weekly car loadings hold above the million-mark is proof of the continued large distribution of goods.

"Weekly bank clearings, $9,226,602,000."

BONDS RATHER QUIET BUT MARKET UNDERTONE FIRM

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Bond prices moved within rather irregular limits in today's quiet trading, but the undertone was firm.

Foreign bonds held up well in the face of the rioting in Vienna, small initial recessions being recorded by the Austrian and Hungarian issues. Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean 7s opened a point higher and Polish 8s improved fractionally.

Chief interest in the railroad list centered in the renewed buying of Erie convertible 4s, series D, which advanced two points in sympathy with the establishment of a new high record by the road's common stock, into which they are convertible. Northern Pacific 3s and 6s and Denver & Rio Grande 5s showed moderate gains.

United States Government bonds were irregular.

Weekly Butter Review.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Arrivals of butter at the four principal markets continue heavy, exceeding by a sizeable margin those of the previous week and the corresponding week a year ago.

These heavir arrivals and a slight slowing up in demand have resulted in larger quantities being sent to freezers. The net into storage movement at four markets has exceeded that of the corresponding week a year ago by over 500,000 pounds.

According to official figures, the country has stored 8,000,000 pounds more butter in June, 1927, than were stored in June, 1926 and 4,000,000 pounds more than in any previous June whatever.

COTTON MARKET HIGHER ON NEW YORK EXCHANGE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 16.—The cotton market opened firm today at an advance of 2 to 17 points on a renewal of more or less general buying promoted by firmness in Liverpool and continued apprehension of boll weevil damage due to unsettled weather in the south.

Prices for all new crop positions made new high records, October selling up to 18.35 and March to 18.85, while May advanced to 18.98. Stop orders were uncovered at these figures. But there was also heavy realizing which supplied the initial demand and caused reactions of 5 to 10 points from the best in early trading.

Private cables reported covering and brisk buying for London and continental account in Liverpool and said weather advices were seriously regarded as presaging damage to the crop.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 105,000 bales, against 62,000 last year.

Futures closed firm, 25 to 34 higher; July 18.04; October 18.50 to 18.53; December 18.75 to 18.77; January 18.86; March 19.02 to 19.07. Spot steady; middling 18.30.

The advance inspired by the Government's acreage report of last Saturday was slowed up by rather heavy realizing as prices approached the 18-cent level for October contracts in the cotton market here during the past week. These offerings were gradually absorbed, however, and prices Friday made new high records for the season on all new crop positions, with October selling at 18.20c, January at 18.55c, or more —than a cent a pound above the low level of last Saturday morning.

During the earlier part of the week realizing was promoted by talk of more favorable weather conditions in the South as later reflected by the weekly report of the Weather Bureau on Wednesday. A continuation of showery weather in the Eastern belt and rains in the West made an unfavorable impression on sentiment later, however, and while the rains were considered beneficial in some parts of Texas, —there was a feeling that they had been excessive elsewhere.

This renewal of unfavorable weather conditions seemed to offset the previous reports of improved crop progress and also revive the talk of probable serious boll weevil damage during the summer. The first of the private midmonth reports to make its appearance was published Friday, placing the condition at 77.4 compared with 75.8 two weeks previously and 74.2 at the same time last year.

This was in line with the talk of an improvement in the condition of the crop since the private end-June reports were issued, but the feeling had been quite generally expressed in the trade here that a yield of more than one-third of a bale per acre is hardly to be anticipated this season.

The view applied to the acreage reported under cultivation would pull the crop down to about 14,250,000 bales without allowance of abandonment of acreage after July 1. The report of the Census Bureau showing domestic consumption of 662,630 bales for June, or the highest on record for that particular month, served to emphasize bullish features in the statistical position and in some cases estimates of the world's probable consumption for the season appear to have been increased somewhat.

Firmness in the Egyptian has probably contributed to the firmness of American, but the factors chiefly discussed have been the reduction in acreage, the continued active distribution of old crop cotton and the fear of deterioration in coming crop prospects.

Creator of Marthalet Armand Models Tells How She Achieves It by Different Sorts of Sleeves.

By MME. VALLET.

PARIS.

SLEEVE-VARIETY continues to delight the smart Parisennes whom I am constantly trying to satisfy, and I am at present planning a number of models for my autumn collection, which will be distinguished again by many different sorts of sleeves, just as it was last season. Women are always waiting for something new, and I am just as anxious to gratify their perfectly natural appetite, providing these new things can be achieved without sacrificing any of the good things which already exist.

Recent seasons have been somewhat hard, for I have never found the styles so flattering as they are at the present time, and this makes it hard for me to abandon any of its lovely features.

A simple straight-line dress in solid color most assuredly promotes the much desired slender appearance, and anything added to this must be carefully considered beforehand, for the slightest bit of thoughtlessly placed trimming can add several pounds to a woman's appearance, and the saving of one of these all-important pounds in these days is surely not to be frowned upon.

Optical Illusions.

Weighty dresses suggest a corresponding degree of underlying weight, and light dresses imply a light body underneath. I have seen many women, for example, made to appear twice their age by wearing heavily embroidered dresses. And many a wise woman has achieved gracefulness and slenderness despite her stout proportions by wearing well-cut gowns of light weight. Often I have found that trimming on the dress itself would add age, whereas the same trimmings and more—on the sleeves—produced the opposite effect, taking attention from the real source of stoutness to the full sleeves, showing slender underneath and at the same time cleverly implying that the dress is also quite full and creating a highly advantageous optical illusion.

Tucking and pleating will remain popular, as they are two of the best known means of effecting these valuable illusions and trim a dress without adding to its weight-appearance. My skirts will remain short, as they are at present. A very straight line prevails in the back, and the fullness of the skirts is brought to the front. The sleeves, for the most part, are flat, well-adjusted above and lightly floating about the hand, with various flares, giving a graceful, sweeping impression.

The materials most in evidence in my new collection will be velvet, crepe de chine and crepe georgette. Daytime colors most in favor with me are "bottle" green, "chaudron," and silver gray. For evening, "blue de roi" and pink. Snakeskin remains an extremely popular trimming, and I am not executing numerous creations for Parisiennes which testify to the favor in which this material is still held.

Vogue Will Continue.

Velvet will never have enjoyed a greater success than the one in store for it with the opening of the autumn collections, and if I were a woman of moderate means and could only afford one evening gown for the coming season it would certainly be of velvet black, rich blue or pink, according to which was most flattering. This stately material was seen everywhere last winter, and it is fortunate for many women that their old gowns can in thousands of instances be slightly made over to answer the purposes of absolutely new ones.

"What change would you favor?" you may ask. Well, nine times out of ten I should probably touch nothing but the sleeves. The lines of dresses that were in good taste last year have not changed, so the apparently new dress may be achieved through the simplest of means.

If the last year's dress is of black velvet, for example, with a red belt, I should consider replacing the belt by one of gray (for example) and putting in any one of many kinds of sleeves, of georgette crepe, trimmed in some novel way with the same shade. Or I'd leave the red belt and put some red on the sleeves, for red will be a good color this autumn, and it is flattering to most women besides—especially in the cold months. This can be decided according to one's own feelings. If you are going to say: "Everybody has seen me in this and I feel uncomfortable, knowing that they are thinking it's the same old thing, by all means make the transformation more marked.

Comfort Is First Requisite.

You must first of all feel comfortable, at perfect ease, and let other things follow this mental condition which is the foundation of being well-dressed. It is not an unusual sight for us who see so many women in fine clothes to behold one whose body is laden with the best things money can buy but who, nevertheless, because she does not feel self-confident, fails to produce the appearance of a smart woman. What we call "savoir faire" in France is essential to being "chic."

The truth is that the widely envied Parisian smartness is the result of an interior as well as an exterior condition, and these two should work in close co-operation, being perfectly attuned to each other at all times. Better far have less money and more belief in one's self, and wear the little one with an air that exalts it, than have much money with which to bedeck one's self, and none of the poise—the "savoir faire"—which is the underlying secret of giving the charming appearance. There are certain rules of simplicity and restraint which all women should know and abide by; after this is done one might almost venture the statement that a woman is as well dressed as she feels she is well dressed.

The Winter Tendencies.

Simplicity will remain the keynote of the most distinctive fashions for the oncoming winter season—a much-studied simplicity that satisfies all one's demands upon dress without being in the least conspicuously composed. It has been written by some great author that "Art is the concealment of art." This simplicity I write of is closely related to art as defined in that epigram. This simplicity is the concealment of simplicity. If your garments are chosen and assembled so as to make people comment upon their simplicity at once, they will not be what I am discussing. One's appearance deserves all manner of thought, but traces of this thought should never be prominently in evidence. Subdued trimmings go far towards helping one towards this end. On a black gown of dull satin, for example, I put a trimming of black shiny satin. This scheme is also carried out with other colors. Tucks and pleats, in elaborate designs, afford a most refined and effective trimming, abounding with gracefulness. If you have worn tucks on a certain part of a dress and found them unbecoming for any one of many reasons, this need not cause prejudice, for by putting them elsewhere an entirely different effect may be achieved with a result altogether pleasing.

I have heard women say: "Tucks make me look old." This is silly talk. Tucks may make one look either younger or older or slimmer or stouter. It is all a matter of proportion. Just as no two faces are alike, no two bodies are identical, and we who are always creating styles for this variety of body types know that bodies are as different as faces. Women are willing to study their faces somewhat before choosing hats, etc., but comparatively few stop to consider their bodies in this way. I cannot over-emphasize the importance of knowing the body as well as the face and bearing them equally in mind when selecting and assembling what one wears. Kasha cloth has become classical, like crepe de chine and georgette crepe, and much of it will be seen next winter, along with many other woolen materials, especially jersey. Harmonizing trimming will be in best taste, generally speaking.

Snakeskin is still being worn and will be seen in many models next season, but its high tide is past, and I am sure its popularity will steadily diminish.

Canning at Home

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON

HOME canning and preserving the home kitchen begins with the coming of the first fruits. There are many methods of doing the job and the one best suited to one's own needs should be selected. The old-fashioned "open-kettle" way still has its advantages. Cooked in an open kettle, without hot or cold pack methods of blanching and processing resulted in wonderful preserves.

If we are going to use the cold pack method we must heat the fruit or vegetables by placing in cheesecloth, then plunging them into boiling water held at that temperature for five minutes, then, when so specified, the stuff must be cold dipped and packed in the jars. After packing the covers are put on, but not tightened, and are set into the kettle to be processed for the given length of time suggested for each recipe. Then the jars are taken out, covers are tightened, and they are turned upside down to cool.

Use only prime fruit for preserving or canning, wash and prepare it as carefully as possible to get the best results. If the syrups are prepared ahead for thin syrup use one cupful of sugar to three cupfuls of water. For medium syrup use one cupful of sugar to two cupfuls of water, and for thick syrup use one cupful of sugar to one cupful of water.

Early apples that are too sour to use in other ways can be made into canned applesauce, sweetened to taste and sealed hot. This is of good flavor and an economy, also handy to have when the snow flies. In labelling, date the jars so that those done first may be used first. There is shrinkage to calculate in the different fruits. Cherries pitted may be packed closer than those with pits left in. Apricots and peaches should be halved and stoned for ordinary preserving or canning. They should be left whole when sweet pickled or preserved with cordials.

Children's Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Mrs. Coyote Is Hurried

We very seldom count the cost
Until we know a thing is lost.
—Mrs. Coyote.

Mrs. Coyote knew it was now or never

MRS. COYOTE lay hidden in the tall grass back of Polly Chuck's home. Polly Chuck had run over to rub noses with Johnny Chuck, who was living in another house nearby for the time being. The four young Chucks had scattered in search of sweet clover. It was very clear that they didn't suspect danger at all. Because they could see Old Man Coyote far out on the Green Meadows they were unafraid. Johnny Chuck and Polly Chuck were both watching them. They had forgotten all about Mrs. Coyote. If Johnny Chuck had been asked about Mrs. Coyote, he would have said that she was over in the Green Forest, for that is the direction in which she had gone when she parted with Old Man Coyote before he had come over to scare all the Chuck family into their underground houses.

Mrs. Coyote could feel her mouth water as she kept her eyes fixed on the fattest of the four young Chucks. She felt sure that she was near enough now to catch him before he could get to the safety of his home. But she wanted two, one for herself and one for Old Man Coyote. So she waited, hoping that two would after a while feed together.

Now all this time Sammy Jay had known nothing of what was going on. He had seen Farmer Brown's Boy and Bowser the Hound go down the Long Lane out onto the Green Meadows. He had seen this from the Old Orchard. Now Sammy is always interested in whatever Farmer Brown's Boy does, so he took to his blue wings and started for a certain young tree that grows in the dear Old Briar-patch. From that he could look out over the Green Meadows and see all that went on. The nearest way to the dear Old Briar-patch is almost directly over Polly Chuck's home. As Sammy was right over it he looked down. What he saw surprised him so that he almost forgot to keep his wings moving. Yes, sir, he did so. He was looking right down on Mrs. Coyote and on those four young Chucks, who hadn't the slightest idea that Mrs. Coyote was anywhere near. His mouth flew open, but for a moment no sound came forth. You see, Sammy was so surprised that he had lost his voice. But it was for a moment only. Then he found it. My, you should have heard him scream!

"Thief, thief, thief, thief!" he screamed, as only Sammy can scream.

Mrs. Coyote didn't know Sammy was anywhere near. Without thinking she looked up, and such an angry look as she gave Sammy. Of course, the poor little Chucks looked up, too, and so did Johnny Chuck and Polly Chuck. They knew well enough what that cry meant. At the same instant Bowser the Hound caught a faint whiff of Old Man Coyote's scent and, lifting his nose, he sent his great voice rolling across the Green Meadows.

Mrs. Coyote knew it was now or never. The four little Chucks started to scramble for their home. Mrs. Coyote sprang for the fattest one, but just as she sprang Bowser the Hound bayed again. Now it isn't often that Old Man Coyote misses when he jumps for anybody. Probably if he had been in Mrs. Coyote's place he would have caught that fat Chuck. But you know Mrs. Coyote had been a prisoner most of her life and she hadn't had the experience to make her the best of hunters. Besides, the screaming of Sammy Jay and the baying of Bowser the Hound hurried her. She was so hurried that she failed to see that the fat little Chuck was just ready to dodge. And so in the first jump she missed him. That is, she missed all but his funny little tail. One of her paws landed on that funny little tail. For just a second it held that young Chuck there, but before she could make another move that tail slipped from under her paws and one of the worst frightened little Chucks that ever lived was scrambling for the doorway of his home.

The Healthfulness Of Summer Camps

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOU may even now be looking about for a camp for your boy or girl, or even for yourself, for the approaching hot season, especially if you go in for motor touring.

This is a most healthful form of outing, but the selection of a camp should not be made in disregard of sanitary principles.

This whole question has been gone into very systematically, and camps have been placed under supervision by health authorities in Maine, New York and some other states.

We are told by Dr. Charles G. Cox that on account of the danger from carriers of typhoid and other diseases, campers and food handlers should be medically examined before they are permitted to enter a camp.

This necessity is no less acute in small roadside tourist camps where everyone congregates. But medical inspection here, it seems, is impracticable. Its absence should be compensated for as far as possible by the provision of adequate equipment and by proper spacing of the sleeping quarters to prevent undue danger from contact infection. Tourist camps should be sited with special care to avoid polluting springs, wells or streams.

One of the most important requirements for a sanitary camp is a site where the soil is porous and dry, for this allows the disposal of liquid wastes by seepage and gives freedom from mosquitoes. The best site is on a stream or lake with an eastern exposure, so that the woods will offer shade from the hot afternoon sun.

Many of the larger camps situated on lakes and streams use surface water for most purposes and rely upon wells or springs for drinking. This dual supply is unsatisfactory, because campers tend to drink the surface water when it is clear and has a pleasant taste. Since surface water is constantly exposed to different kinds of pollution, it should never be drunk untreated. Larger camps may use filters or liquid chlorine disinfecting apparatus, but these small plants should not be trusted too far, as they are generally not looked after by experts.

There are a number of disinfectants marketed for use with unknown water, the most common of which are sodium hypochlorite and chloride of lime. Since the strength of these varies very much, it is essential to control the dose by means of the starch iodide or ortho-toluidine tests, the apparatus for which is sold in a form suitable for campers.

Few camps are big or elaborate enough to own sewage disposal plants, and liquid waste must usually be disposed of by seepage and porous soil. Since this is often a problem in small camps, but in larger camps it is better to keep the production of liquid waste down to a minimum, and to use some kind of privy instead of flush latrines, which, however, are the best when they can be properly drained. Privies should be fly-tight and properly ventilated, and the seat covers and door should be self-closing. One seat should be provided for every twenty people.

Garbage may be plowed under the soil or buried in trenches, but in larger camps, it is better to burn it in an incinerator. The construction should allow an adequate draught and plenty of fuel, otherwise temperatures will be low and there will be an unpleasant odor.

Your proper insistence upon these points will not only be protection of your own health, but will do good by educating others on very important matters.

WHERE'S THE THRIFT IN STINGY CARESSES?

Winifred Black Discourses About a Wife Who Allowed Only Seven Kisses a Year to Her Husband

By WINIFRED BLACK.

WINIFRED BLACK

A MAN out in California won a point recently in a divorce suit on the ground that his wife had only given him seven kisses a year ever since they were married.

Do you blame him?

Seven kisses—and every one of them counted and weighed and measured and balanced! Faugh! What is a kiss, anyhow, if it isn't a spontaneous, joyous thrill?

"Duty kisses"—don't you hate them, little pecks on the cheek that don't mean a thing in the world?"

Seven kisses a year! Dear me, what a grudging, stingy, mean, measuring, counting here and adding there, sort of business.

What a hideous time they must have in life, these grudging curmudgeons who weigh their favors and count their benefits! Who are they, pray tell, that what they have to give is so precious?

What is there so entrancing about them that they should expect the whole world to weigh and balance with them?

I know a man who gives his little boy a penny every once in awhile as a great, generous and loving gift. I've seen the little boy take the penny and run around behind his father's back and make a face at him. Very naughty of him, but somehow I can't find it in my heart to blame him.

Father makes such a pompous business of the penny giving. He holds it in his hand, he makes it shine in the light, he talks about it, he looks at it until you'd think it was a diamond out of the coronet of the Empress of all the Indies. By the time it gets into the little boy's hand, I feel like snatching it and throwing it into the deep sea for the mermaids to gloat over.

What a time they do make about themselves and their favors—these people who count their pennies and weigh their kisses and "give," with a gesture that isn't giving at all!

A gift is a gift, it should never be a bargain, should it?

These bargain invitations, how do you like them? You invite me to your party and I'll invite you to mine; you introduce me to the Senator and I'll introduce you to the Governor. What sort of generous, open-handed, open-hearted giving do you call that?

Tell me something nice that someone said about me and I'll tell you something nice someone said about you. If you don't begin it, I'll never start. Fine, open-handed sort of thing, isn't it—all this bargaining and chaffering over friendly offices and the things that love gives without even a thought?

I'm afraid I sympathize quite a bit with the man who had the seven-kisses-a-year wife.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

REVOLT

OH, who am I to fret about the day's small cares and stings when sun is boldly shining out, rose nods and robin sings? And why should I alone go bent beneath a load of care? The meadowbrook laughs, well-content; the finch trills, debonair. The whole earth bears a message sweet; why should I turn away from nodding roses at my feet and linnets' carols gay? Ah, man has grown too worldly-wise to trust to simple things, to glean his gladness from blue skies or whir of happy wings. His wisdom is a dismal thing, his days are spent in gloom, while other, lesser creatures cling to lives of song and bloom. But I am weary of the way man's learning makes so dark, and so I brim each passing day with lore of rose and lark.

Keeping a Schoolgirl Complexion

Never risk on skin any but true complexion soap

THE important point to the modern beauty rule of keeping the skin clean and pores open, with soap and water cleansing, is to use the right kind of soap.

That means a true complexion soap. A soap made primarily for facial use. Soaps good for many purposes, other than for beauty, are often too harsh for the skin.

Thus, largely on expert advice, millions use Palmolive Soap; touch their faces with no other. It is made of cosmetic oils. It is made for one purpose only—to protect and beautify the skin.

Wash the face gently with Palmolive. Massage its balmy olive and palm oil lather into the skin. Rinse with warm water; then with cold. That is all—it's nature's rule for keeping that schoolgirl complexion.

Do that regularly, and particularly before bed. Never let powder, rouge or make-up remain on your skin over night. Note how much better your skin is in even one week.

Get Palmolive today. Costs but 10c a cake. Use no other on your face. But be sure you get GENUINE Palmolive. Crude imitations, represented to be of olive and palm oils, are not the same as Palmolive. Remember that and TAKE CARE. The Palmolive-Peet Co., Chicago, U. S. A.

Abie's Irish Rose

by ANNE NICHOLS

CHAPTER XXIV.

AS THE STORY GOES.

Unable to overcome the prejudice which her father, Patrick Murphy, California contractor, holds against Jews, Rose-Mary has wired Abraham Levy, with whom she has fallen in love while nursing him in a war-time hospital, back of the lines in France, that she is coming East to marry him. In the meantime in the environs of Abie's home in the Bronx, much is taking place which protends ill for the young people's success in overcoming the age-old prejudices of their parents. However, they are to have an ally in the Isaac Cohens, a quaint old Jewish couple. Isaac, at present, is in the midst of a hot argument with Sol Stearn, over the President's salary.

So continued the argument, the two men standing close together, hands flying, breath making white streaks in the wintry air, the chill wind whipping up the street. For 15 minutes they stood so. For a half hour. An hour. The night was growing colder and colder, but on they talked, trying to reach a forlorn, futile point as to what the President did with his salary.

Finally Isaac Cohen announced with an air of conviction:

"Say, don' ve pay de rabbi $50 a wik?"

"Ve do," answered Stearn.

"An' sometimes der iss not $50 a wik in the treasury? Vell, what den? De money iss not dere. The Rabbi don' get hiss salary."

"No."

"An' did you tink dat de seventy-fi' tousand dollars is always in de treasury at Washington for the Prisident?"

"Mm . . ."

"Ah, now you see what? Whin der money it iss not dere, de Prisident don' get his salary. Jus like der Rabbi, what! Jus' a figure.

"Ah."

"Yes sir!"

The question was settled at last, to the satisfaction of both. They turned their collars up higher, stuffed their hands deeper in their pockets and hurried on home, each finally at ease about this momentous problem.

But it did not end there.

Isaac Cohen arrived at home at 2 o'clock, with a terrible chill. His wife was sympathetic at first, but after she had wheeled out of him just how he had obtained the chill—and it was not hard to learn, because be could not refrain from telling her boastfully how he had settled the matter about the President's salary—she said:

"It serfs you right! I hope you die—always talkin' on strit corners!"

She was no more sympathetic the next morning, when she made him arise and start chopping the fish and meat for the gefulderfish.

So Isaac sat there now, uttering a pathetic little cough now and then, and chopping steadily at his monotonous task.

Mrs. Cohen entered the kitchen, a gaudy apron over her house dress.

"Vhat, still coughin'?" she asked, in an accusing voice.

"But, mamakins!" insisted Isaac meekly, "I haf a bad cold—it hoits right here."

He laid a hand on his chest.

"Always complainin'" chided his wife. "Now, you knew very vell dat vhin I had my oberation . . ."

"Oi, Mama, don' spik of it, please!"

Tears sprang instantly to Mrs. Cohen's eyes, and her countenance twisted, as she began to cry. Isaac hurriedly threw down his chopper and rushed to her side. He tried to encompass her ample waist with his short arms.

"Dere, dere," he said in soothing tones, "I didn't mean to hoit you. Go ahead, Mama, spik of your operation, spik of it—"

"You are like all men—dey only tink it is dey can haf pains an' aches!"

Isaac tried to find the most advantageous point to embrace her. But he finally contented himsef with holding her hand and patting it, murmuring soft words.

Then a thought came to him.

"Mama, don' cry. Hit makes der eyes red aroun.' Rimimber ve mus' go to Solomon's dis afternoon."

"Ah, yis, Solomon's!" answered Mrs. Cohen. A little spasm passed through her rotund figure; she sniffled and stopped weeping.

At Solomon Levy's, she knew, she could always talk freely of her operation. In public her husband could not chide her. And Solomon always seemed interested. She had never yet been able to give the full details of this outstanding event in her life. Always some peculiar and untimely thing would come up to cause her to bring the story to an end—just as she was getting into the most interesting part.

This made her all the more determined to tell it some day in full. This and the fact that Solomon always showed such interest.

Mrs. Cohen dated everything as before and after her operation.

She was extremely grateful to Isaac for reminding her of the visit to Solomon's, and she showed it by giving him a chaste little kiss on his lips. Then she hurried from the kitchen, like some little girl who has suddenly relented and kissed her sweetheart, only to be overcome by a guilty feeling immediately afterward.

Isaac shook his head and settled down to his task of preparing the gefulderfisch.

LAUGHING AROUND THE WORLD

with IRVIN S. COBB

A Mere Question of Endurance.

AN English politician standing for the Commons was holding forth in high dudgeon on the magnificence of his constituency and the justification of his cause. He clawed the record of the opposition to shreds and sailed across the whole field of politics, even as Lindbergh leapt the Atlantic.

In the audience he spotted a voter who was running with the opposition. In the midst of his peroration he leaned over the footlights and, shaking his finger, shouted vehemently:

"Come up 'ere on the platform, you un'appy wrench, and listen as to 'ow you and yours is livin' in ignorance wi' no 'ope of bein' educated into wot is the cause of this 'ere up'eaval in the rightin' of the wrongs of this 'ere country. Wot are you standin' there for, anyhow?"

"Cheereo 'Arry," responded the outlander. "I can stand down 'ere as long as you can lie up there."

The Greatest Story in the World—By Kor

The Bible in Pictures

And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their burdens: and he spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren. And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand. And when Moses went out the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow? And the man said, Who made thee a prince and a judge over us? intendest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the Egyptian? And Moses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known.

MEXICAN CATHOLICS HOPE SOON TO RESUME SERVICES

Release of Lay Leaders Held on Sedition Charges Shows Change in Government Attitude.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, July 16.—The release from prison by orders of President Calles of Catholic lay leaders who had been arrested on the charge of sedition, arouses hopes, says El Universal Grafico, that the religious controversy in Mexico may be settled and Catholic Church services resumed. These services have been suspended since the religious laws were put into effect last summer.

The chief of the secret police has announced that the released Catholics will be kept under surveillance and arrested again, if they continue an anti-government attitude.

THE BEAUTY SHOP

By Frances Olivier

It was a face that flushed rather than blushed. One is flattering, the other disfiguring.

VISITOR—Isn't it funny, when a girl of 16 goes red in the face, everybody thinks, "Oh, the dear innocent! How charming!" But when a woman past 25 has the misfortune to turn pink, as do I, frequently, and always at the wrong moment, a great many people think, "Another lawbreaker! Heavens, the effect on the complexion alone is enough to keep any self-respecting woman away from the stuff!" Such are our prejudices!

Being entirely guiltless in the matter, any imputation cast upon my private choice of thirst quenchers leaves me quite undisturbed. My objection to flaring up in mottled tones of pink and red is purely esthetic. Tell me, do please, how I can spare my flushes.

BEAUTY SPECIALIST—I have to admit that the blush of a girl in her teens is more delightful to the eye than the sudden and uneven rise of color in the face of a woman emerging from her twenties, but I am not at all sure that the casual observer is so quick to applaud the one and shun the other, as you seem to think.

Nine times out of 10 the flush that sets jumping a thousand "pins and needles" in your face and neck goes completely unnoticed by all except yourself. My chief reason for telling you this is to help you overcome your sensitiveness in the matter. A rush of blood to the face is not unlike the antics of an unruly child—the more attention paid to it the worse it becomes. And there you have the first step in correcting your imperfection.

The next practical step in acquiring a "flush-proof" skin is to avoid strong stumulants of all sorts. Tea, coffee, piping hot foods, heavily spiced foods, extremely hot baths, icy cold baths: these things are not for you.

A diet of uncooked vegetables and fruits is what your system is hungering for. Things that will aid your eliminative organs to function easily and regularly. You see, you are, in a sense, a lawbreaker, as is every one guilty of auto-intoxication.

Three glasses of cold water taken the first thing in the morning will prove of incalculable help to you, and so will 15 or 20 minutes of some mild form of daily exercise, like walking. Come to think of it, is there anything else quite like walking in the way of mild, healthful exercise? But few of us appreciate the delights and the benefits of this easy, natural form of motion until we sprain an ankle and sitting is enforced upon us.

No, I shall not deny you the satisfaction of local treatment for your particular "malady." Now that cucumbers are beginning to be plentiful, buy an extra one now and then for strictly boudoir use. Cut it into as many slices as will completely cover your face and neck and lightly bind the slices in place by covering the cucumber "mask" with a net or chiffon veil, tying it at the back of the head. You will find it convenient to lie down while you take this "treatment." Fifteen minutes will be quite enough to allow the cooling juice to sink into your skin and do its good work.

(Copyright, 1927.)

Midgets.

Cream one cupful of butter with one and a half cupfuls of sugar, then blend in three beaten eggs, a cupful of seeded and chopped raisins, a tablespoonful of chopped citron, a level teaspoonful each of cinnamon, allspice, and cloves. Add sufficient flour to be able to roll the mixture on a lightly floured board. Roll a quarter-inch thick, cut in crescents and bake a delicate brown. Frost with coffee frosting and cover with finely chopped pistachio nuts.

For Short-Stemmed Flowers.

If you have no wire screen for arranging the short stemmed flowers, stretch a piece of mosquito netting over your embroidery hoop; set this in a shallow dish filled with water and poke the stems through the netting when you arrange the flowers.

Boise de Rose Wins Empire City Derby

By the Associated Press.

EMPIRE CITY RACE RACK, N. Y., July 16.—William Ziegler's Boise de Rose perfectly ridden by L. Fator, was an easy winner of the Empire City derby at a mile and a quarter, here this aftrenoon. The race was run over a sloppy track. Boise de Rose is a known mudder and when the track was changed to mud there was great rejoicing in the Ziegler stable.

Dolan, running in E. F. Cooney's silks, was second, and Black Panther, W. J. Salmon's good racer, third.

The ten furlongs were run in 2:08. Boise de Rose was favorite at 4 to 5.

Dolan rushed right to the front, followed by Boise de Rose. It was plain passing the stand the first time that Boise de Rose would win. Fator had him under double wraps. He never made a move until they straightened out in the stretch. Then he cut loose, closed gamely and won by three lengths. Dolan took the place by eight lengths from Black Panther.

Mrs. Hurd Wins Groton Tourney

Miss Maureen Orcutt Defeated in Golf Final, Four and Three.

By the Associated Press.

GROTON, Conn., July 16.—In a match which was hers practically from the start, Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Merion, Pa., yesterday brought success out of her sixth attempt to put her name on the Griswold Bowl in the Shenecossett annual women's invitation golf tournament.

The former women's titleholder defeated her youthful opponent in the final, Miss Maureen Orcutt, White Beeches, N. J., metropolitan champion, four and three. Mrs. Hurd lost only one hole in this match, the 14th, when she was dormie five.

The veteran woman golfer took the lead from the first tee and at the turn she was four up. Miss Orcutt fell into several traps and seemed unable to find her game. She was six on to the green at the 15th hole, where the match ended.

Her usually skillful iron shots were ineffective and several short putts found her shooting erratic.

Mrs. Hurd, however, played consistently steady golf.

ORWOLL HAS BATTING MARK OF .396 AND LEADS ASSOCIATION

By the Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 16.—Robbed of his customary place at the top of the American Association batting list, a week ago, Dewitt Lebourveau, the Toledo slugger, fell from third to fifth place in averages compiled today including Wednesday's games.

Kirkham, the Columbus sensation, and Grimes, the Mudhen's first baseman, both passed Bevo who fell off 10 points. Orwoll, Milwaukee, and Ollie Tucker, the Millers' new fly chaser, showed the way.

With the home run crop showing signs of improvement, Earl Smith, Minneapolis, has increased the pace, gathering two more to make his score 15.

Palmero, Toledo's Cuban moundsman, went the full route this week for his fifth straight victory, but Zinn of Kansas City really leads the regular toilers with 12 victories to 5 defeats.

Haas, St. Paul's speedy outer gardner, caught up with Lebourveau in stolen bases at the 16 mark, but McMillan, St. Paul's keystone guardian, passed both by sliding in safely four times for a count of 17.

Leading hitters of the Association: Orwoll, Milwaukee, .396; Tucker, Minneapolis, .393; Kirkham, Columbus, .388; Grimes, Toledo, .382; Lebourveau, Toledo, .380; Russell, Indianapolis, .380; Duncan, Minneapolis, .366; Hauser, Kansas City, .366; Heving, Toledo, .364; Peters, Kansas City, .360.

Jack Dempsey as Slow As He Was in Contest With Tunney, Says Wray

Former Champion Is in Better Physicial Condition, But Reaction to Punishment Leaves Him as Puzzled as in Bout in Which He Lost Title.

By J. E. Wray,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, Saratoga Lake, N. Y., July 16.—"Jack Dempsey is 50 per cent better today than he was when he fought Tunney." "Jack Dempsey isn't as good as the Dempsey we saw working out at Atlantic City last year;" "Dempsey has slowed down to a whisper and can't beat a carpet"; "Write your own ticket on Sharkey"; and "Dempsey is in better condition now than he has been since he fought Firpo" were some of the opinions dropped by the horde of experts who practiced their profession at ringside here yesterday, when Jack Dempsey stepped through his training paces for 32 minutes by the watch.

The boys who mold the minds of the masses on subjects pugilistic, it will thus be seen, are far from enjoying that unanimity of view which they exhibited last September. One gathers the idea that molding their own minds on the subject of Dempsey is giving most of the experts a hard job this time.

However, in the aggregate opinion seemed to be generally unfavorable to Jack, whose showing against the light sparring partners opposed to him was far from scintillating. These boys one and all encountered all too little difficulty in hitting Jack and the former champion had entirely too much trouble in hitting his partners to please most of the old ringsiders.

It may be that having been scorched last year the clairvoyants are inclined to the other extreme and have become over skeptical.

Looks Good Outwardly.

Dempsey has an ideal training place here and its favorable effect was at once apparent when he appeared for the afternoon show, for which some 500 $1.10 customers were on hand.

Included in the list present, besides the writers were old timers like Tom O'Rourke, Tom Sharkey, Jimmy DeForest and other more or less capable observers.

Dempsey looked outwardly good, as he threw off his bath robe and went at the pulleys. There is no fat on him that need be mentioned. He appears to weigh within 10 pounds of his 1919 Toledo weight of 185. In fact, Tillie Herman of Jack's sparring staff, told the writer that Jack weighed 197 pounds. Dempsey did not seem that heavy.

Without the chance to compare the men side by side, one would have ventured from recollection of Jack Sharkey, the opinion that Sharkey is the bigger man of the two. Sharkey's reputed tonnage was last reported at 195.

Dempsey went at his work unsmilingly. In fact, it is said by his men that his playful mood has passed and he is now quarrelsome and irritable. Not once during the session did he smile or even look pleasant or bright. He spoke to no one in the crowd. Impassively he punished the pulleys, the punching bag and his partners. He did not speak throughout the performance.

Almost as brown as a toasted coffee bean, Dempsey looked healthy and fairly fast at the weights and the punching bag. He stepped the entire six minutes on his toes and was not sweating at the finish. In fact, at the close of his 32-minute workout he was perspiring only slightly, although the men carried him fast. The myth about his working flat-footed and changing his style also was exploded.

The crowd began to chatter as Dempsey donned a head-gear for his first boxing round, which was with Tillie Herman, a middleweight fighter, who helped Tom Gibons prepare for Dempsey in 1923. Evidently Herman had been instructed to throw all the gloves he could into Dempsey's face and body and to be prepared to take whatever might come back.

Gloves flew thick and fast—and hard. They thudded all over Dempsey. He could not seem to block them, except with his pneumatic head gear or his body.

Dempsey reacted to the attack unfavorably. He was not ready with a counter and his face, at times, bore the Philadelphia expression, as of one who knew not what it was all about.

Then he would get going and cuff and hammer Herman around. Once or twice he let loose with all he had and hit Herman solidly. But nothing dropped. It was ding-dong work, with Dempsey taking much of the punishment. Then Herman, his nose bleeding slightly, tired and Dempsey began to find the mark.

The round was so strenuous that it was called an afternoon for Herman, who thereupon sat at ringside and told all who would listen that "Jack was 100 per cent the Dempsey of old."

Shade Finds the Mark.

But it was mean of middleweight Dave Shade to give the lie to Tillie. Jack did not shine against Shade. Whether it was that the second round was designed to be purely defensive by Dempsey, or whether he was tired from the exertions of the first round, Jack spent most of his time trying to avoid the left-hooks socked into his mid-section by the vicious Shade. The little fellow made no impression on Dempsey, but he found the mark with his left—Sharkey's best hand.

Little Johnny Saxon, a lightweight, was next. He is designed to speed up Dempsey's blocking and counter hitting. The fast little fellow smacked Dempsey good and plenty, but Jack was finding the range, now, and he beat Saxon to the punch on two or three occasions and showed some improvement in timing and judgment of distance.

Against Marty Gallagher, who fought the fourth and final boxing round of the afternoon, Dempsey showed even more improvement. Gallagher appeared to weigh about 185 pounds. He is not a boxer of rank but he seemed to have some merit. Dempsey was soon countering effectively now and then, against Gallagher, and also hitting faster than he had previously done.

In Fair Physical Shape.

The boxing ended all too soon for those who had come to observe, and it was too short to tell about Dempsey's endurance. Perhaps it stopped just as Dempsey was loosening up to his best pace.

A wrestling and tugging match with Martin Ludecke, finished the show. Dempsey appeared tired in this and seemed glad when it was over. They wiped his face and decked him with a nifty bath-robe and slipped him off to the showers to the cheers of the spectators.

The writer gathered from his workout, the first time he has seen Dempsey this year, that Jack is in fair physical condition, possibly better than when he faced Tunney; that he is still strong; that he still can hit hard, but that he is just as slow as he was last year and that his reaction to punishment left him nearly as puzzled as when he faced Tunney.

Considering that he has been boxing these same boys for more than two weeks, the ease with which they hit him and the slowness with which he grasped opportunities to counter or take the lead away was not encouraging.

Lacks Old Inspiration.

Dempsey seemed to lack all the snap and fire that once made him notable in training camps of other days. He slogs his way doggedly through his work without inspiration of feature or performance. He seems to have lost the playfulness that once indicated a satisfied frame of mind. He is in dead earnest but still is groping for the lost spark.

Dempsey's endurance and wind have been questioned, but his training partners vow that there is no flaw there. Dempsey has fought 12 rounds in camp and has come through strong. They tell also he has had plenty of wind developing road work.

Some of his followers declare that his work in California was of the severest sort and calculated to convince any one that Dempsey must be in great shape.

Probably the best and most truthful testimony given the writer was by Martin Burke, who has been with Dempsey in several training camps.

Has Not Regained Speed.

"Dempsey is in a better frame of mind, in better condition and is hitting better than he was at Atlantic City," Burke said. "I do not think he is any faster or has regained his speed."

Less encouraging was the opinion of old Tom O'Rourke, veteran promoter and manager.

"It looks like its time to write 'rest in peace' over Jack's pugilistic career," was Tom's view.

Dempsey will break camp next Tuesday. His preparation is about over. If he is not fit now he never will be. He will go to New York to rest two days before the fight. And it is quite certain that when he enters the ring there will be seen neither a physical wreck, nor a rejuvenated Dempsey of 1919. Somewhere between 50 and 75 per cent of the old Dempsey will still be there.

Glendon Returns As Navy's Coach

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., July 16.—Richard (Old Dick) Glendon, crew coach of Columbia University for the past two seasons, will report to the Naval Academy and will immediately take charge of crew work, it was announced last night by Commander Jonas H. Ingram, director of athletics.

As coach at the Naval Academy, Glendon will be returning to an old post. He was mentor of the Navy crews for 24 years—from 1900 until he went to Columbia in 1924. The eight which captured the Olympic championship in 1920 was one of his products.

PRES. HICKEY ALLOWS PROTEST AND GAME IS ORDERED REPLAYED

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Louisville's 4 to 3 victory over Indianapolis in the first game of the July Fourth doubleheader was canceled today and ordered replayed by President Thomas J. Hickey of the American Association.

Indianapolis protested that a ball which was hit out of the park and then bounded back should have been credited as a home run. The Louisville club claimed that when the ball bounded back into the playing field it was in play and the runner should have only as many bases as he was able to take.

The umpires agreed with Louisville and Indianapolis finished the game under protest.

President Hickey's ruling said that there was no rule covering the claim of the Louisville club and any ball hit out of the park was a home run.

WESTERN LEAGUER HAS PILFERED 31 BASES THIS SEASON

TULSA, Okla., July 16.—When Pittsburg Pirates get in need of some more heavy hitters, they have in prospect their rookie, Comorosky, now with the Wichita club of the Western League who held grimly to his .386 mark, while the leaders were passing him on the toboggan.

The mighty Casey, who has not returned to the lineup since he was beaned several weeks ago, has the only .400 mark in the league. Munson, another heavy hitting oiler, has been doing a thorough job of maintaining the Tulsa leadership in home runs while Casey is recovering. Munson has 20. McNally of Wichita got two but even so can boast of only 16.

Joe Rabbit has 31 stolen bases, the best mark in league ball today.

With the jinx shaken off George Blaeholder resumed his job of mowing down the opposition, scoring his seventeenth victory of the season although Peery of Wichita still tops him in the percentage figures. Peery gathered two wins, for a mark of 11 and 2.

Leading hitters of the Western League; Casey, Tulsa, .424; Comorosky, Michita, .386; Cunningorosky, Wichita, .386; Bennett Tulsa, .385; Langford, Des Moines, .382; Murphy, Denver .364; Rabbit, Omaha, .362; F. Griffin, Des Moines, .361; Reagan, Denver, .357 and Davis, Amarillo, .357.

SARATOGA LAKE, N. Y., July 16.

TONIGHT Sammy Mandell will defend the title he bought and paid for. Mandell, a powerful hitter and clever boxer put up a $50,000 guarantee for Rocky Kansas and then defeated him in a poor bout. He will oppose Phil McGraw and there is not the slightest doubt of the result, unless Sammy's foot has slipped in the past year. McGraw, while considered a promising boy, did not do so well last year. He lost four fights and fought one draw. Ace Hudkins beat him twice. Stanley Loayza beat him once and the venerable Eddie Kid Wagner gained the fourth verdict over him.

None of these boys equals Mandell, who is a really good boy with the gloves, in a scientific way. There is one boy that Mandell apparently does not want to meet. He is Sid Terris, a fighter who can wield the mitts as shiftily as Mandell and who seems to have developed a punch, at last.

This match is the best possible in the lightweight division and would be highly interesting to the few surviving fans who regard cleverness, rather than mayhem, as the first essential of boxing success.

They Seldom Change.

TERRIS' sudden appearance with a knockout in his hitherto powderpuff glove reminds one forcibly of Jack Sharkey. Like Terris, Sharkey was a light hitter. Then, through one fight—that with Jim Maloney—he suddenly "developed" a knockout punch.

Something similar happened to old Mike McTigue, once known and reviled as the king of the "safety-first" fighters—a glove grabber and a tapper. Then, having made a failure at this, Mike late in life seemed to acquire a knockout punch.

There is a difference in Mike's case, however. In McTigue's early career he was a slugger and a knocker out. Then he began to face heavier men and he dropped his forthright hitting to become foxy.

In other words, Mike had the punch, to begin with; whereas neither Terris nor Sharkey can show anything of the sort in the record book.

One is tempted to doubt whether it is right to attribute a knockout punch to fighters on the strength of a single Kayo.

Sharkey will need a punch. If he can offer Dempsey nothing more than slaps, cuffs and a clean pair of heels his will be a lost cause.

Capital Fandom Plans to Honor Walter Johnson

Secretary Hoover Heads Committee for Big Celebration Next Month.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 16—A ce- bration that will be in keeping with his stirring years in league baseball is being planned for Walter Johnson who, on Aug. 2, will round out a score of seasons on the mound.

Singularly enough, on that day Washington's great pitcher will be able to take the box against the Detroit Tigers, the first team he faced in his major circuit debut in 1907.

While the intervening years between that first contest and the game next month have rendered Walter Johnson an institution in the capital's baseballdom, many fans who will turn out for the celebration were not born when he first donned the Senators uniform.

Still a Great Pitcher.

Although the passing of time has slowed the speed ball of other years, the "Big Train," as he is known to Washington, still is among the topnotchers in the big leagues, and his skill, mellowed by the experience of many hard fought battles, today finds him a moundsmen dreaded by opposing teams.

Secretary Hoover, a baseball fan of first rank, is chairman of the celebration committee.

The American League is to present its dean of pitchers with the first "distinguished service medal" of the circuit ever awarded, it is planned. The medal was especially created to honor Johnson. The erection of a shaft or tablet, procured by popular subscription, in the Griffith park here is expected to be another memorial.

JONES W

ATLANTA STAR HAD ONE EAGLE AND 17 BIRDIES

Veteran Golfers Still Marvelling at Bobby's 285 Over Difficult Course at St. Andrews.

By the Associated Press.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, July 16.—Throughout the whole of Scotland today there could be heard only the name of Bobby Jones and the fame of the "wonder golf" that won him the open championship of Britain for the second time in two years.

Assembled here in "Sanct Androis" by the sea, the golfing shrine and capital of the world, old Scotsmen, champions of their day, could not get over marveling at the young American's feat of playing 72 holes in 285 strokes, six strokes better than had ever been done at St. Andrews in all golf's history.

"There never was such golf," said old James Braid, the Scottish pro of 57, who won the British open twice in succession back in 1905 and 1906, the last it had been done until Jones did it yesterday.

Taylor Calls Him Greatest.

"There is no doubt or quibble that he is the world's greatest golfer," was the tribute of J. H. Taylor, who scored a repeat victory himself back in the 90's.

"He has patterned himself on the great masters," said Ted Ray, "and improved upon them."

Said George Duncan, noted pro: "Bobby is the greatest driver, pitcher and putter in medal play I have seen for many, many years."

The witchery of Bobby's clubs as he stroked home clean and true with one eagle and 17 birdies to do 72 holes in three under fours produced a wild outburst of homage such as Scotland could pay in tribute only to the master golfer of them all.

Children were hoisted high in the air to see the young man who is hailed as the greatest modern exponent of a classic game. Hysteria for a moment reigned amid the heathered hills and dour old Scots who had not danced for joy in years, threw themselves into the Highland Fling.

Jones Shows Strain.

Through it all and through the second demonstration which greeted his decision to allow the trophy to remain at the Royal and Ancient Club here, the youthful hero of the day stood modestly by with a wan, but happy smile which ill concealed the strain of his battle with the hazards of the historic course.

Today the champion goes to Carnoustie, the old home of Stewart Maiden, the Atlanta professional, who gave him his early schooling in the ways of golf, and who accompanied him from America for defense of his crown. Jones hopes to play a round with his tutor on the course that sent such golfers as MacDonald Smith and Brothers, and Maiden to the United States.

The ball which Bobby sent down the last holes like a homing pigeon was treasured carefully, wrapped for safekeeping in two British banknotes. On it still was the stain of St. Andrews grass and a bit of tar from the road where Jones chipped a difficult shot to the home green.

The ball is destined for a crippled boy in Pittsburgh, Pa., young Rody Marshall Jr., whose back was broken two years ago by a dive into shallow water. When playing at Oakmont recently Bobby confided to his young friend that if he won at St. Andrews Rody should have the ball.

VON ELM "TICKLED TO DEATH" AT JONES' VICTORY IN SCOTLAND

LOS ANGELES, July 16.—"I'm tickled to death to hear of Bobby Jones winning the British championship again," George Von Elm, national amateur golf champion, who defeated Jones for the amateur title last September, said today. "I think it's the greatest victory he ever achieved in golf.

"Off-hand, I'd say his 68—72—73—72 for the 72 holes was the greatest scoring feat ever made in the history of the British open. Such golf as Jones displayed is marvelous. His victory is a tremendous boost for amateur golf, especially in America. His win last year at St. Anne's with 291 and his successful defense today of the title with 285 prove what I've always contended, that Jones is the greatest golfer the world has ever known."

Von Elm said he would leave Los Angeles Aug. 1, for the national amateur at Minneapolis and that he hoped to meet Jones in another match for the title.

SPORT SALAD

by L. C. Davis

Lyrics by Limerick Luke.

THERE was a young man named Uriah,
In love with a girl named Maria,
"Oh, come fly with me,
Pretty maiden," said he,
"And I'll fly ya across to Hawaii."

THERE was a young lady named Dinah,
Who lived in the town of Shelbina;
She eloped with an Ace
And they hopped into space
And next morning were married in China.

THERE was a young man of St. Clair,
Who took a long ride through the air;
He flew from New York
To the city of Cork
And in forty-nine minutes was there.

Sparring Partners in His Camp Real Fighters, Dempsey Declares

Denial Made by Former Champion That Men Are Picked to Give Him Chance to Show Off as a Punching Wizard.

By Jack Dempsey.

As Told to a Representative of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright 1927)

SARATOGA, N. Y., July 16.—Ever since I gained a little reputation and could afford a staff of sparring partners, I've been reading that they all are "a lot of bums." That's wrong—and mighty unfair to a collection of really great fighters who have sparred with me during the years since Toledo.

I've always wanted good men to box with; always tried to get the toughes tones. I've never turned down any man as an applicant for a sparring partner's job because he was tough or looked dangerous. If there was anyone around loose who figured he could show me up or could flatten me in training bout he always was accommodated.

Never since 1918, when I whipped Fulton and could afford a staff of partners, has any man who wanted to mix it with me been denied the chance. Yet the boys constantly write home and say that my sparring squad is made up of "a lot of bums," thus giving the impression that I am picking soft ones so as to make a showing.

Lists "Tough" Ones.

I had Bill Tate with me for several fights and Bill wasn't a bum. If you doubt that, ask Harry Wills, the man Tate whipped. I had the Jamaica Kid and Panama Joe Gans when they were good. I had Harry Greb, who later won two world's championships. Also, I had Tommy Loughran, Jack Renault and George Godfrey. I had Jack Burke when he was going great. And now I have Dave Shade, Allentown Joe Gans and Marty Burke.

If those fighters are bums—well, whats a good fighter?

Sure, a lot of bums have come along—and quickly prove they were just that. But I didn't know they were "bums" until I took them on. When they showed they could not stand the gaff, I didn't keep them around. They got the "gate."

Since pitching camp for my training here I've tackled more different sparring partners than at any time in any other camp. Leo P. Flynn has tossed two, three and four new ones in at me almost every day. The bulk of them have been big fellows with reputations. And each man has climbed into the ring with the idea of beating me up and adding to that reputation.

"Punch or Depart."

They've fought me—and I've fought back. That's the arrangement under which the big fellows work. If a fellow showed up well—gave me about as much as he had to take—he had a regular job. He wasn't let out because he was tough.

But if fellows showed they couldn't take a pounding and couldn't give me a real argument—well, I didn't keep them around so that I could knock them over every day. I don't want birds like that in my camp. They were let loose—and in a hurry, too.

The good ones stay, the poor ones go. That's the program. And I hardly think that strict adherence to that system gives anybody the license to create the impression that I'm surrounding myself with "a lot of bums," just to make a punching showing.

YACHT SCORPION WINS SEVERAL TROPHIES IN LAKE ERIE MEET

By the Associated Press

PUT IN BAY, Ohio, July 16.—Three of Lake Erie's fastest racing sloops flashed across the finish line in the 34th annual interlake Yachting Association regatta yesterday, with the Ardette, Scorpion and Elyria taking the first three places only a few second behind one another.

The brilliant finish closed the regatta with the Scorpion taking the largest share of honors in the Class R race, yesterday's second place securing the Northrup, Parsons and Interlake trophies for her. The Ardette is from the Detroit Yacht Club.

The Scorpion, of the Buffalo Yacht Club, was only two seconds behind the winner at the finish of the nine-mile race. The Elyria, of the Cleveland Yacht Club crowded the Scorpion crossing the finish but three seconds later. The Quiver of Detroit, after a poor start due to a misunderstanding, finished 48 seconds behind the winner.

Mandell Boxes McGraw in Title Bout, Tonight

Lightweight Champion Will Have Weight Advantage as Result of Postponement.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, July 16.—The weather permitting, Sammy Mandell of Rockford, Ill., lightweight champion will defend his title from the attack of Phil McGraw, of Detroti in the University of Detroit's new stadium, tonight. Mandell, McGraw and Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons took the count Friday when rain which had started Thursday, fell intermittently Friday causing postponement of the title match.

As a consequence of the delay, Mandell who weighed in at three o'clock Friday afternoon will gain at least four pounds over McGraw who tiped the scales at 132⅛ pounds. Paddy Mullins, McGraw's manager, decares Mullins' protests were not heeded by Tom Bigger, State Boxing Commissioner, who ruled that Mandell had met the weight requirements of 135 pounds, and that was that.

Bigger added, however, that if the fight was postoned for over 48 hours both boxers would be compelled to make the required weight.

Interest in the fight apparently remains unchecked with Mandell remaining the favorite.

Hudkins to Box Baker on Coast

Bout to Be Held in Los Angeles July 25 Despite Eastern Protests.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, July 16.—Ace Hudkins, Nebraska welterweight boxer, will hold his scheduled 10-round bout here July 25 with Sergt. Sammy Baker, in spite of any action the New York Boxing Commission may take against him, Clyde Hudkins, his brother and manager, announced.

Notice was received by the boxer from the New York commission that Ace would be suspended temporarily pending a complete investigation into the signing by him of a contract to fight here for Dick Donald, and another fight for Humbert Fugazy, New York promoter, Aug. 3.

Hudkins and Baker, according to Donald, signed for him on the same day, and 12 hours later were said to have signed with Fugazy for the bout Aug. 3. Donald claims priority by virtue of having the first contract.

SAPIRO DROPS $1,000,000 SUIT AFTER SECOND FORD APOLOGY

Terms of Settlement Kept Secret but Lawyer Says Jewish Leader Made No Demand for Damages.

BLAME FOR ARTICLES PLACED ON WRITER

Inaccuracies Admitted and Charge That Ring Sought to Exploit Farmers Is Withdrawn.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Aaron Sapiro today abandoned his $1,000,000 libel suit against Henry Ford upon the announcement that the automobile manufacturer, in a second apology, had retracted all personal charges against the Chicago attorney printed in the Ford-owned weekly, the Dearborn Independent, had withdrawn the allegation that a Jewish ring sought to exploit the American farmer and had indorsed the principle of co-operative marketing.

The exact terms of the settlement of the libel suit were not announced, but it was stated by Martin Ansorge, former Congressman of New York, and J. Kostman who acted for Ford, in the negotiations with Sapiro at Chicago, that Sapiro made no demand whatsoever for any compensation for any damages in view of the retraction.

"I got everything I was fighting for," said Sapiro in announcing settlement of the suit. "I am entirely satisfied."

Blame Placed Upon Writer.

In the second statement by Ford and the Dearborn Independent, the blame for the allegations against Sapiro was placed upon Robert Morgan of Berkeley, Cal., who wrote under the name of "Harry Dunn."

"Mr Henry Ford did not participate personally in the publication of the articles and has no personal knowledge of what was said in them," read the statement upon which settlement of the protracted law suit was based. "He, of course, deprecates greatly that any facts that were published in a periodical so closely associated with his name in the minds of the public should be untrue."

Recognizes Value of Co-operative

Sapiro has devoted practically his entire professional career to the work of the farmers' co-operative associations and it was testified at the first trial of the libel suit has acted in his legal capacity in the organizations of co-operatives virtually throughout the United States and Canada.

In the Ford-Dearborn Independent recantation he found possibly his greatest satisfaction in this statement:

"If the advancement and development of co-operative marketing has suffered by reason of the publication of these articles, then we sincerely regret it.

"We recognize co-operative marketing holds promise of substantial relief to the farmer and grower."

"I have suffered a very great loss personally," said Sapiro, as he smilingly announced the settlement. "I still have my training in the law, however, and I am going to start all over again and rebuild."

Sapiro Expresses Gratification.
